MORNING MIST.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.
BY ELSIE MAY.

The pearly-white mist hangeth over the hills
In a circlet of silvery light;
Its drops were shower[illegible] down from some angelic wings
That have passed in the dark, stilly night.

My fancy brings rainbow-hued visions to me,
As I gaze on the beautiful mist,
And breathe the perfume of the myriad flowers
That its dew-dropping lips must have kissed.

Methinks it is somewhat like childhood's first hours,
When Hope o'er the young spirit holds sway,
Until the warm sun of mature after-life,
Dooms the hopes of our youth to decay.

Awakes us from dreaming, and scatters away
The bright innocence, trusting, and truth,
That like a pure dew-mist envelops our hearts
In the sinless beginning of youth.

Methinks it is also like faith and the joy
That enlivens the tired pilgrim's soul,
When passed are the most of the turmoils of life,
And he's nearing the infinite goal.

The flowers of his heart have grown dusty and dim,
And his feet become worn with the strife,
But softly falls down on his parched, weary soul,
Cooling drops from the River of Life.

They brighten his way, as the dew does the flowers,
They dispel the hot rays of life's sun,
And soon, like mist, rise aloft with his soul,
To the goal that his life-race has won.

CONGO, THE CONJURER.

A STORY OF SHOW LIFE.

CHAPTER LIII.
MONK'S SECRET.

"My name is Edward Everton," he began, and I am next heir to the estates and baronetcy after Mr. Charles Everton—in fact, he and I are cousins. He was the son of my uncle, the elder brother, and I of the younger. We were brought up by another uncle, a rich but excellent man, who, besides, brought up another orphan, Ellen. We were with him from a tender age, and having been left poor, were wholly dependent on him. The father of Arthur was young, and no one expected his untimely death. My cousin Charles was more sedate and grave than myself to all appearance. He was studious, knew all the old man's foibles, and wound himself about his heart. Both went to school, but with different results: I was fond of play, of fun, and never hesitated to become a truant when any amusement was to be obtained. My happiness and delight consisted in Punch-and-Judys, traveling showmen, conjurers. All my pocket-money went in books which taught the art of the prestidigitateur, and in feeing some of the showmen to teach me. This went on until I was about eighteen. I did nothing outrageous, but I was wild, thoughtless, and too fond of amusement and pleasure. My relative and guardian determined I should go into the army, while Charles should stop at home and marry Ellen. This upset me. Between eighteen and nineteen I began to be charmed by the budding beauties of this lovely girl. I became more of a home-bird; though, not to arouse the jealous animosity of Charles, we often met in the fields and woods. She at once allowed me to see that she did not approve of our guardian's arrangements. Charles' eyes were gradually opened, and he resolved to get rid of me. Our guardian left to him, as the eldest, all money matters, and he negotiated the purchase of my commission. I found it was to be in a regiment bound to Canada for some years. My mind was made up. I would marry my darling before I went, and I would fight the battle of the world unaided. I had a few hundreds which I could command at pleasure. But it was not easy to contrive a meeting. We were watched by my cousin and the toady tools who knew he was the favorite. So was the world. Outside the town in which we lived was a dreary, black district of coal-mines. I slipped a note in my darling's hand one night, making an appointment, in desperation, at a deserted hut and mill. I went early to the spot and waited—ay, waited hours for her. At length she came all trembling and in tears, and cast herself into my arms. She had had a scene with our guardian. He loved her, I know, as the apple of his eye, but he was wilful, obstinate. He had decided that she must marry Charles, and, the fiat having gone forth, could be no more altered than the laws of the Medes and Persians. She had come to say farewell. I indignantly repudiated any such idea, and propounded my plan of an immediate marriage. We were discussing it in that sweet way in which lovers conduct such discussions, when we were interrupted by a fierce and angry voice. 'Scoundrel and traitor! what have you to say to my affianced wife?' I drew back angrily and faced the furious man. His rage was unbounded, and he had a pistol in his hand. He aimed it at my head. My poor girl rushed in and received the contents in her arm. She fell, rolled in agony on the ground, right away to the mouth of the pit. Wild, mad, horrified, Charles Everton fled straight to my uncle and declared that I had murdered her, though by accident. I was hunted up by my guardian's servant, and a letter placed in my hand. I did not understand it then; I do now. 'Through you I have lost my girl; never let me see nor hear of you again. I send you your own money; of mine you will have none. A warrant will be issued for your apprehension in four days.' He believed my darling to be dead, as did Charles. Thank heaven she was but slightly wounded, and ere a month we were married in a far-off parish in my real name. I bought a caravan, and took to my favorite wild and roving life. My names have been many—Monk and Congo the Conjurer are the best known. When, however, my daughter grew up, and her health required a change, we took her to Italy. She recovered, became a splendid singer, and is now, thank heaven, a glorious girl!"

"Who will finish by becoming Lady Everton," said the detective. "Upon my word, sir, your story amazes me. And your guardian——"

"Saw her once and stole her from me—in vain; she never would leave me. And now, sir, to business."

CHAPTER LIV.
BURNT ASH FARM.

When this story had been concluded and commented on between the two gentlemen, they held further converse. Both were so well aware of the character of the man they had to deal with, as well as the persons he employed, that great caution was required. The death of Arthur and his mother, if necessary to the carrying out of his plans, was, they knew, already decided on; but, they hoped and trusted, was not carried out. Much depended on the signora, who in her quiet way would be sure to watch the master of the house. Her power over him they were fully cognisant of. Besides, neither Septimus Flint nor Monk had been idle. While it was so clearly the interest of Sir Charles to deny the identity of Arthur, and while he could, of course, find witnesses for the purpose, there were those who would be able to swear to his individuality. With these they had communicated. They were still over their breakfasts when a messenger was announced. It was the supposed Gipsy boy, his clothes torn, his face scratched, and with every sign of having had a hard night of it.

"Well," said Monk, eagerly—he knew and appreciated the girl—"what news?"

"I have watched them all night. They have been taken to old Burnt Ash Farm, but will be removed this morning. A cart has been sent for, and you will never see them again."

"Why?"

"I fear me Pharaoh has sworn their death. He hates the young son of the house-dwellers, and swears he shall never see the light of heaven again."

"We must be moving," said Monk, turning to the detective.

That worthy was already up, and pulling on his gloves. Below, horses and an escort, in the shape of Styles and four mounted farmers, awaited them, as also little pony was provided for the girl, and thus guided, the party started. Even in populous England there are places, not twenty miles from London, where one may fancy one's self in a half-peopled country. Moors, downs, and woods still occupy, to the great advantage of its climate and fertility, a good portion of its millions of acres. The county to which we have directed the footsteps of our readers was especially so characterised, and when the Gipsy girl, after twenty minutes' ride, turned into a narrow lane, with high hedges on both sides, ordinary cultivation appeared to have disappeared. She rode onward until an open space was crossed, after which another lane was gained. This, however, was so narrow, so overgrown by briars and hedgerows, that it became necessary to alight. The horses were fastened in a copse, and then the party advanced on foot. Every man was armed. The character of the desperadoes they had to deal with was well known. Even if caught in a common act of poaching they would sell their lives dearly, but now that the accusation against them was more likely to be murder than anything else, it was necessary to be provided against accidents. The girl went first. Her face was very pale, but resolute and determined; and, in accordance with her costume, she carried as weapons a stout staff and a long-barrelled old-fashioned pistol. She moved rapidly but with great circumspection towards the end of the lane. There she halted. The Burnt Ash Farm was a lonely and desolate building. Why it had not been pulled down and its site sown with grass it was difficult to say. The owners for the time had abandoned it. In the first place, it was no longer near the highway—which, for the convenience of the county, had been moved some considerable distance; then its last owners, husband and wife, had been murdered under particularly atrocious circumstances. A new farm house had been built, and the old one abandoned to its fate. There it stood, ivy-clad and gloomy, its windows closed by shutters, and its doors apparently as they had been left thirty years before. During that period it was believed that no one had entered within its precincts. And yet there was smoke rising from one of the chimneys, proving that some tenants, however unrighteously, had made free with the abandoned dwelling. A short conference was held, and then it was resolved to make a sudden dash, and enter the deserted farm house as best they might. No sooner said than done, and all the party were next minute making the best of their way across a narrow space of ground about a hundred yards across. Scarcely had they shown themselves, when they had a specimen of what they had to expect from the audacious foe. A shot was fired at them, and as the little nimbus of smoke from the gun rose in the air, the Gipsy girl fell upon the ground.

"On—on!" she cried. "He will be murdered!"

And as she spoke, despite the wound which had shattered her left arm, she rose and waved them on. As she did so, a second time the barrel of a gun appeared, as if levelled at the party. Styles, the gamekeeper, was, however, too quick for the assassin, for he took rapid and yet careful aim, and the enemy's gun, though discharged, was discharged in the air. The Gipsy girl was helped by the detective, who bound her arm hastily, while the others dashed on. He, however, was very few minutes behind the others—in time to see the gang from the farm disappear down a rude cross-road by means of a covered wagon and two horses, which they hurried forward at the utmost speed of the animals. The Gipsy girl, now too weak and sore to be of immediate use to them, pointed out a way by which they could reach their horses. It was after they had forced their way through the thick bushes of a hedge, at no great distance from the thicket. Not an instant was lost, and before long the whole party were mounted in front of the old farm-house, the back entrance of which, through the yard, had been forced open by the marauders. The girl determined to await their return at Burnt Ash Farm, as, under the circumstances, she would only impede their march. Having faithfully promised to return and see to her, the horsemen, guided by the tracks left by the wagon, dashed away, helter-skelter, over hedge and ditch. Still the tilted wagon kept on at a pace which, however, must have tried its strength very much, and presently, when they were about a hundred yards distant from it, it suddenly halted in its course. Not an instant was lost. The wagon was reached, but the traces were cut, the horses gone, and the vehicle empty. Where was the Lady of Everton and her unfortunate son? Not a moment was lost in discussion. All began a strict search of the woods about, and soon found the terrified pettifogger ensconced behind a hedge. He was dragged forth, and so in a few minutes was Namish, the Gipsy, who had stumbled from his horse, and sprained his foot. But of the Patterer no trace or sign was to be found. Having secured these two prisoners, who solemnly declared that they had nothing to say about the Lady Everton or her son, they were led back to the Burnt Ash Farm. They had been absent an hour.

CHAPTER LV.
THE GIPSY GIRL AND HER LOVER.

The Gipsy girl seated herself in an old arm-chair. Though the blood had ceased to flow, and the detective had bandaged her arm with great care, she suffered great pain, while the arm itself—it was the left—was quite useless. She was sad indeed. This girl, who from the hour she had seen him had loved Arthur Everton, had given him her whole heart without reserve or afterthought, knew full well that in saving his life, in restoring him to his friends, she was doing so for another. But the girl was wholly unselfish. Arthur had never for one moment led her to believe that he owed her any allegiance. Besides, despite the life he had led, she knew what was his real position in society, and could never hope that the heir of such great wealth would look down upon a poor Gipsy girl. True, it had happened once, in the reign when the people cut off the head of their king, that an Everton had married a Gipsy; but customs were changed now, and such deeds were regarded as out of place, and in bad taste. And yet she sat there thinking of him with all that loving affection which she had ever bestowed upon him, and wondering whether he would really circumvent his enemies, and come to his own. As she thus communed with herself, she heard, or fancied she heard, a noise overhead. In an instant she was all breathless attention. Had the villains fled, and left the unfortunate victims confined in this deserted den to perish by starvation, or what? The sound above was of some heavy body moving across the floor, and was followed by a low and horrible groan of anguish. The girl reseated herself. Something appeared to warn her that the presence above was that of an enemy, and not of a friend. With a coolness which was characteristic of her race, she examined her pistol, and even endured the agony of using her left hand fingers in the task. Then she rose, stooped behind the chair, and waited. Not for long. From behind the old wooden fabric she saw a door at the top of the stairs leading into the kitchen, open, and an awful figure present itself. It was the Gipsy, Pharaoh the cripple, his face distorted with rage, his eyes starting from his head and blood flowing over his face. Then the girl knew that it was he who had fired the shot that had so nearly cost her her life. He growled and groaned as he descended the stairs, which he did seated, his hands helping to raise his body, which had been so fearfully injured during his memorable fall in the coal mine.

"May the curse of the text dweller descend on the cowardly knaves!" he said, in a low, muttering way. "Even Namish has deserted me! But I have my revenge! Ere I die I shall know that the boy who has been the cause of all my miseries—who despoiled me of my love—who reduced me to this wretched extremity, is dead! Ha! ha! ha!—dead! and that when his friends come to claim his body they will find it—oh, yes! If the ruins of this house can give up the charred bones!"

The poor girl's heart beat wildly in her breast as she heard the words, uttered aloud, amid imprecations of the most fearful and terrible character. What did he mean? While speaking he had reached the kitchen, and had squatted himself on a stool by the fire-place, where smouldered some embers. A great pile of faggots, with other rubbish, stood beside the fire-place. Pharaoh drew forth a pipe, loaded it, took down a bottle from the mantel-piece, and began to enjoy himself.

"Ha! ha! ha! I have, at all events, my revenge! and no one will be any the wiser. They have run away—they have abandoned them! May they perish in Gehanna! But they have left me my revenge."

What could he mean? The man was silent now, smoking and drinking. When this had continued about a quarter of an hour, during which time the unfortunate Gipsy girl suffered agonies untold, he cast away his pipe, drained his tumbler of raw spirits, and stood as erect as was in his power by means of crutches. He then threw some rags over the pile of dry wood and faggots, and over this cast the contents of a stone bottle of spirits of wine. Then he stooped to light a taper. All this was enough to prove to the Gipsy girl that Arthur, if not his mother also, was in the house.

"Hold, cowardly assassin!" she said, in a ringing voice, "or die!"

He turned to see the girl, of whose affection he believed himself to have been robbed by Arthur, standing pale, stern, and motionless, with a pistol pointed at his head.

"Ha! ha! ha! the hawk and the dove!" he cried, with a horrible grin. "So you have come to share his fate!"

"I come to save and to destroy," she responded, without taking her hand off the trigger. "Put down that taper!"

He turned right round, leaning on his crutches, and faced her.

"Fool! and do you know so little of Romany as to think that I will not forego my vengeance at the bidding of a false and recreant girl, who has betrayed her people to the house-dweller—who has brought the kestrel into the nest of the hunted bird? No!"

And using that marvelous agility which never deserted him, even though a cripple and wounded, he made a spring at her. The girl, though terrified in the extreme, and aware of his character, had the requisite coolness of thought to step back and fire. The bullet took effect, and Pharaoh, though it was only a slight wound, lost his presence of mind, and seating himself, placed his crutches by his side. Quick as thought she had possession of them, and he was helpless. He had left his gun and ammunition up stairs. How he raved at the Gipsy girl, how he begged and implored, it is useless to record here, but it was all in vain. The girl would not hear him, and at length his resource was temporary silence. Zelah at once looked around, in the hope of finding some clue, but none presented itself to her eye. She crawled up stairs, despite her agony and weakness, and examined every room. They were all empty. She descended again to the kitchen, and hastened from room to room. But no sign. Her fierce impatience grew so great that she turned upon the wounded Gipsy, who sat, scornful and sardonic, against the very chair which had concealed herself.

"What have you done with him?" she said. "Speak, or I will end your wretched existence!"

"Zelah," cried the Gipsy, in a deep, stern voice, "you, who were to be my wife, have ftly made yourself my executioner. I ask no better fate. We were happy. Under the greenwood tree, in the shadow of the forest, we have wandered hand in hand, and vowed that, as long as life was given, to be all to one another."

"Childish nonsense. When this passed I knew not I had a heart."

"You were my wife that was to be until we went back to that cold clay from which we came. Then came this boy, this house-dweller, and, as you say, taught you that you had a heart; you turned to him and betrayed your friends; you saw me crippled thus by him, and you laughed; but you knew not what the stars had prognosticated."

"And what was that?" said Zelah, quite coldly, watching his every motion and glance, as a cat might have watched a mouse.

"That he and I—the tent-dweller and the house-dweller—shall perish together!"

All this time, crouching at no great distance, enduring horrible pain, Zelah had clutched her pistol.

"When, and how?"

"Now!" he thundered; and before she could as much as raise her hand he had cast several of those chemical pellets, known to the Gipsies and other incendiaries, upon the pile of wood, which began to smoulder, and then burst into a fierce blaze.

At the same time Zelah heard a terrible groan, followed by a cry of mortal anguish. Arthur was confined beneath the kitchen, and the house was on fire! The flames had caught so rapidly that, unless assistance was soon obtained, the old farm house—the wood of which was light tinder—must perish, and all within it become a prey to the rapid, fierce, and devouring element. With a wild shriek of anguish she moved to the door, just as the crippled Gipsy, who had suddenly made up his mind to die, began his death song. In this, and other matters, the Romanies very much resembled the Red Indians. It was with a genuine shriek of delight that Zelah welcomed the detective and his party. In a moment she had explained the real state of the case. Septimus Flint turned Namish and the Gipsy, who was bound upon [illegible] and asked him the secret. He scornfully refused to enter into any explanation. But the low, pettifogging attorney, who saw a way of getting out of the terrible mess, rubbed his hands, and demanded to speak to the detective in private, on one side. His Old Bailey proclivities never abandoned him. In the first place, he bargained that, if he made a clean breast of the whole matter, he should be treated as gently as possible.

"Be quick!" cried the detective; "my friends are getting impatient. I dare say if all is well you will get off with the rest."

Then Mr. fellow, darting into the kitchen, pointed out a couple of planks, which were found, on examination, to be loose, and which concealed one of those inland caches used by smugglers when hunted by the coast-guard. It was of no great extent, and there, almost helpless corpses, lay the wretched victims of the avarice and lust of power which through life had animated Charles Everton, and driven him to deeds of blood such as only are perpetrated by such wild and exceptionable natures. Not a moment was lost. Monk and the detective, assisted by Styles, soon had the unfortunate mother and son out. Everything was done to revive them, but in vain. They appeared to have been rescued only to die. Frantic with rage and fear, Monk ordered the wagon up, and in this the inanimate bodies were lain on piles of straw, with the Gipsy girl seated at their head. A messenger, with a clergyman and doctor was only three miles distant, and here they resolved to go, as unless aid was soon obtained, there could be no doubt as to the result. Meanwhile the fire continued. The fierce and passionate Pharaoh, having crawled to where his crutches lay, had scrambled up stairs, it is supposed, in search of his gun. But he little knew the nature of the furnace he had kindled. The house was of timber, and the flames, with one curling rush, caught the stairs, and cut off his retreat. His fearful yells of rage, despair, and hate were heard for one moment, and then all was still. Flames and smoke poured out of every window, and no ladder, if there had been one, would have been of any avail. The avenging party looked in, in blank dismay, a moment, but nothing could be done. Ere a quarter of an hour had elapsed the old thatched roof was in flames, and the case was hopeless. They rode off with a very strong conviction that the atrocious ruffian had escaped his just fate—that of hanging. But all were too anxious about the poor victims to delay any longer, and the wagon was driven off as gently as possible. The great question to be resolved was, after all their fearful ill-usage, would they be saved? Was life flickering still within their bosoms, or had death claimed them for her own. The answer must come ere long.

Meanwhile things, to all appearance, had been going on swimmingly at Everton Hall. It is true that Sir Charles, after having spun his web so finely and cunningly, after arranging to rid himself of mother and son at one fell swoop, was not at ease. The presence of so eminent a detective as Septimus Flint, and other causes, alarmed him. It was true that his four confederates—the Patterer, Namish, Pharaoh, and the low attorney—were men ready and willing to do anything for money; but his experience showed him that even such associates as these were not to be depended on when the deed to be done was murder. Four such satellites might easily rid him of a woman and a boy, whose bones might bleach for four years down some deserted coal-mine or abandoned quarry; but when the pinch came even they appeared to hesitate. Why? Because, he fancied, that when the deed was done they would be as much in his power as he had been in theirs. Therefore they would put off their actual perpetration of the evil deed until they were assured of impunity. The mad-house plot was out of the question, that he knew. Nothing remained but to do the worst, and this he resolved should be the end that very night. Cupidity, the grasping desire to keep that which he had earned at any price, to hold up his head in society, had always influenced him; but now there was added to this the further temptation of a glorious young bride, with whose beauty, loveliness, and grace he was so infatuated, that any price appeared as nothing, if only this were the reward. He was very busy that morning. The prima donna, who set the example of early hours to all the company, was out in the grounds with him before breakfast, and after, under the pretence of arranging some pic-nic or other expedition for the day, contrived to absorb him again. Sir Charles Everton was in a fearful fume, but it was of no avail, as the beautiful actress was merciless. At last, just before lunch, he contrived to go to his room. The [illegible] baronet had gained his present position by such iniquitous means that one idea was always oppressing his brain—the necessity of being prepared for instant flight. With this view he had secured a belt full of valuable diamonds, and a small valise crammed with gold, as well as other available securities, which were locked in his strong box. These he examined, after closing the door, and counted out four separate sums of two hundred and fifty pounds, which he made into four distinct parcels. These were for his four confederates, when they could tell him that all danger was over—that his enemies were dead—namely, his wife, the mother of his two children—fortunately in charge of a distant relative—and his step-son. The parcels were made and replaced in a drawer, and he was about to ring a bell, to order a horse, upon which to ride to Burnt Ash Farm—a distance of twenty miles by cross roads—when a knock came to the door.

A QUEER CASE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

"Jack Cade," the captain of "The Forty Thieves," who was arrested last night "After Dark," at his "Home" in "The Fairy Circle," on "The Field of the Cloth of Gold," by Hawkshaw, "The Veteran" detective, entered a plea of "Not Guilty," on [illegible] "Black Friday," to the charge of "Foul Play," made against him by "John Garth," who accused him of the murder of "Kit, the Arkansas Traveler," in the "Streets of New York." Cade's counsel, "The People's Lawyer," said he had received "A Scrap of Paper," by which he could prove that his client had just come "Through by Daylight" from "Across the Continent," when Kit was found dead. He further says that Kit was not murdered, but that he became "Lost Ashore," and was struck by "A Flash of Lightning;" therefore, Garth had made "Much Ado About Nothing," and Cade, who had "Jack Sheppard" and "Paul Clifford" "On the Jury," was acquitted. Yesterday morning, just before "The Peep o'Day," "Sam, the Boy Detective," informed Hawkshaw that Cade had broken into "Uncle Tom's Cabin," blown open the "Iron Chest," and stolen a large sum of "Money" and "The Emerald Ring," which belongs to "The Lady of Lyons," who was supposed to have been "Lost at Sea" with "Don Cæsar De Bazan," while "Among the Breakers" during a "Tempest," when on their way to the "Palace of Truth" to spend their "Honeymoon." Sam said he had been "On the Track" of Cade, and had "Hunted Down" the villain at "Rosedale," and said he would "Help" him to capture Cade if he would meet him at "Saratoga" at midnight. Hawkshaw said he would be there at the "Time and the Hour." They met, and proceeded to "The Cherry Tree Inn," kept by "Guy Mannering" and "Frou-Frou," who are "Man and Wife," and found Cade standing "Under the Gaslight," talking to "The Huguenot," who, according to "Article 47," should have been hung. The detectives made a dash for them, but the Huguenot, "Taking the Chances" of escape, took "A Leap in the Dark," and landed in the "Green Bushes," and escaped. They captured Jack, however, and took him to the "School of Reform," and locked him up. To-day he was tried, but remained as "Cool as a Cucumber;" he was convicted, and the judge showed him a "New Way to Pay Old Debts," by giving him ten years vacation at the county's expense, at the celebrated country villa, "Sing-Sing."

CHARLES H. DUPREZ.

This well-known and experienced minstrel manager was born at Paris, France, March 14th, 1830, and when but a child came with his parents to America, settling in Canada, where his father became extensively engaged in shipping grain, and river navigation between Montreal and Quebec. In 1837 the family moved into the United States. From 1839 to 1847 Mr. Duprez was being educated both in the English and French languages, it having been then the intention of his parents that he should become a priest, but, finding that his inclinations did not that way tend, in 1848 he was apprenticed for five years to a merchant tailor. After serving that time, and coming to the conclusion that the business did not suit him, he resolved to start out into the world and find some business more in accordance with his tastes; so, in 1855 he connected himself with Shorey, Carle and Greene's New Orleans Minstrels, as agent and general director, taking a one third interest in the concern, with the understanding that he was to be the monied man, backing the company as long as he remained with it. The company was then thoroughly organized under the title of Shorey, Carle, Duprez and Greene's New Orleans Minstrels, and traveled throughout the country for two years, meeting with encouraging success. They closed their season at Portsmouth, N. H., July 4th, 1856, when John Carle withdrew from the company, which was re-organized for another tour and known as Shorey, Duprez and Greene's New Orleans Minstrels. In 1858, at Vicksburg, Miss., the partnership was again dissolved, Mr. Shorey withdrawing. In 1860, Lewis Benedict was engaged as first comedian and tambo, which positions he has filled up to the present time. In 1863, at Green Bay, Wis., the firm of Duprez and Greene was dissolved, Mr. Duprez purchasing Mr. Greene's interest in the company for the sum of $3,900, and offering Lewis Benedict an interest therein, which he immediately accepted, and the company was at once re-organized under the title of Duprez and Benedict's New Orleans Minstrels. The company has traveled ten years under that title, meeting with uninterrupted success. In 1870, Mr. Duprez took the entire company of 28 people from Philadelphia, Pa., to San Francisco, Cal., and return, at a cost of $32[illegible] for each person, and rented the California Theatre, in the latter city, at an expense of $10,000 gold for four weeks. The receipts on the opening night, Monday, Aug. 6th, reached the sum of $2,600, and during their first week's performances hundreds were nightly turned from the doors unable to gain admission. After closing their season there they made a tour into the interior of the state, playing to large audiences during three weeks. The company is now on a summer tour, visiting the principal cities. The company is a powerful one, as will be seen by an advertisement in another column. In the fall they will commence an annual tour which will include the principal cities of the United States, the Canadas, and the provinces of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland. Mr. Duprez has been connected with the above troupe nearly twenty years and has traveled with it all that time, save a period of fourteen months, when they were located in Philadelphia, Pa. He is highly esteemed, both by the profession, to which he is attached, and the public generally, and his success may be pronounced as fully deserved, he having been one of the most enterprising of managers in his calling.

LEWIS BENEDICT.

This gentleman, partner with Mr. Duprez, was born in Kingston, Canada, in 1836, and studied law for some time, but finding that profession not in accordance with his tastes, he went to Buffalo, N. Y., where he determined to adopt the minstrel profession, and in the year 1856, upon the stage of the [illegible] in that city, he made his debut in a black face and dance, an "Essence" then very popular, and met with a hearty reception. At St. Louis, Mo., his style being so much different from the host of comedians in the field, secured for him a place immediately in a troupe then organizing, called "Johnson's Empire Minstrels." In the company at that time were the veterans Frank Lynch, Mart Flavin, Dick Moore and several others. The company went as far as St. Joseph, Mo., and met with great success in the west. He was enclemte at this very time, but had concealed this fact from her husband, so that when the Manchester physicians were called in, she being insensible, they were in entire ignorance of her real condition, and imputed her premature confinement caused by the sudden seizure to determination of blood to the head, was too late. The detention she had been subjected to, brought on by too much excitement and exertion. Her added to the improbability of her recovery, had left her no power to rally, in spite of her excellent constitution and previous good health.

FANCHON.

TO MAGGIE MITCHELL.

BY OTTMAR H. ROTHACKER.

A little row of flaring lights, and nothing more,
Doth bar us from the enchanted world that lies before.
How the great, crowded house doth sit as still as death;
With what strange eagerness it hangs upon each [illegible]

Poor Fanchon—it hath not been long since o'er the sea,
The mistress of another art first dreamed of thee;
And yet, perhaps, thou wouldst have been idle in the wave
Of time, that rolls all human things to a sure grave;

But for the artiste who has breathed life in each vein,
And made immortal the dim shadow of a dreamer's brain.
We watch the slender, swaying form so full of grace,
The April change from smile to tears in the sweet face.

The motion of the dainty feet that gleam and glance
Through the weird, solemn beauty of the shadow dance,
Until the flaring lights do fade that guard the play,
And we live in the rustic world, far, far away

Oh, peerless artiste, may sweet happiness ten t thy days,
Long may'st thou live to claim thy meed of worldly praise.
For thy successor cannot be like thee, so wondrous true,
And with thee the neglected witch's child must perish too.

THE CLOSE OF THE SEASON.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY E. C. WALSTON.

"The season will close on the 11th." For two weeks this horrid chirographic warning has stared us in the face, conspicuously, on the "call board" at the head of the green-room stairs, and, I will venture to say, has caused more disquiet than the traditionary "writing on the wall" to our amiable old ancester—the historical Balthazar—for he was not dependent on the "ghost's walking" weekly for his weakly means of support. (My puns insensibly absorb the nature of my landlady's "Mocha" coffee—weak.)

"The season will close on the 11th." Those whose days have worn themselves into weeks, and weeks into months, and months into seasons upon the boards, can understand, and will readily recall the sensations the above sentence awakens. The last night of a season is a peculiar, and, to many, an eventful one. Then each attache of the theatre goes through his or her part in a conscious change of atmosphere, and the skilful one may easily trace in their features the hopes, fears, certainties and uncertainties which will combine to make their morrow's sun a brilliant or a dim one.

Let us mingle with the company to "gather and surmise."

The curtain has fallen on the last act; the audience has dispersed and the auditorium erst so brilliant with beauty, wealth and—gas, is dark and gloomy; but we have no business there. On the floor above the tardy dressers are dropping one by one into the green-room, and coalescing in little groups to discuss the eventful night. All seem to feel the occasion, from the light and airy "juvenile" to the surly janitor, who waits (with a degree of complaisance alarmingly unusual in him)—the dilatory movements of the lingering ones, for it is the last night, and there are adieus to be made and addresses, good wishes and souvenirs for the future to be exchanged.

"What are you going to do with yourself this summer?" inquires the mercurial "heavy tragedian," E. R. D., of the gloomy and misanthropic "low comedian," G. W. H. "Press brick," lugubriously responds the aforesaid melancholy i. c., G. W. H., and then, with an "Othello's occupation's gone" expression, "what do you purpose doing?"

"Me? Oh I shall wander where the woodbine twineth, disport amidst the breakers of Long Branch or revel in the jolly routs at Saratoga. 'Dost like the picture?" To all of which the herein-before mentioned doleful i. c. replies in the words of the gushing Pauline:—"What have I done to thee—how sinned against thee, that thou the dirty little yellow envelope con[illegible] At the same time exhibiting the identical article in question, to the [illegible] ry, with the querulous interrogatory, "how's that to carry a man through the summer—eleven cents a fortnight?" On this cue the "first old woman" explodes in one of her diabolically long reminiscences relative to "the time when I was a young woman and theatricals wasn't what they are now; one was lucky to get so much money as that semi annually, and I remember when my husband walked four hundred miles to an engagement in his russet boots, for lack of a fitter pair, and"—etc., etc., ad infinitum ad nauseam, a "most senseless and [illegible] persecutifier of the terrible "Widow Evercluck;" and, turning her over (metaphorically speaking) to the sympathetic croaking of the "first old man," we find agreeable relief in noting the countenance of the fair haired and modest little girl who is just closing her first season on any stage—save that of her own household, where, for 18 seasons she has reigned the undisputed star—and who on this, the last night, is seriously thinking, carefully weighing all that is good and pleasant against all that is bad and disagreeable in the profession she has accorded a trial, and wonders if the coming season will still further disenchant her with all that was once so bright and beautiful in her unsophisticated eyes. But, above all the debating arises a determination to persevere in the elected path, and by judicious study, exemplary conduct and undying industry, to make herself a honored name among the honorable and to demonstrate indisputably the fact that a woman may be an actress and a LADY.

The other side of the room is all chatter and bustle; the "small people" are holding high carnival, bidding good bye, kissing the ballet, and seriously talking more nonsense than ever fell from the mouth of a Dogberry or a Verges. One has secured his engagement (so he says) for the coming season at the same theatre (he real know that he is lying, for one season's exhibition of his abilities would damn him with any manager); another would not, on any terms, remain under the same stage manager (sour grapes); and another "has got a live dramatic agent to work for him, and feels pretty safe," and still another has decided to "work at his trade during the summer, and trust to luck for the fall" (he is a butcher by trade, and is equally successful as a butcher on the stage or off).

The ubiquitous "call boy" now wags his chin, to the effect that the small people combine and get up a joint benefit, the results of which, it is clear to him, will either consign them all to a cottage by the sea, or—the poor-house.

So they rattle on, and no one gives a thought to the patient, hard-working, effectual old mainspring of the whole concern, the prompter, until some one, more thoughtful than the others, suggests that they say good bye en masse to "Pap," and search is accordingly made for "Pap," but following his usual custom, the old man has stolen silently out, and is on his way home, thinking only of the dear ones awaiting him there and his manager's interests. A faithful servant is that same old "Pap."

All things have a close, so have theatrical seasons as a consequence, so have bank accounts. The busiest bees in the theatrical hive have scarcely a "superfluousness" of honey to keep them through the summer's famine, and the drones are poor indeed, unless lucky enough to eke out their miserable subsistence by the aid of some well timed "summer snap," and looking at their long faces one feels inclined to advise that they expend a dollar of their last salary in having all their teeth drawn out, for it is clear that they will have no use for them during the summer solstice.

This is the last night, and to-morrow may be a "white day" or a "blue day" to two of the prominent members of the theatre—the treasurer and the manager. To-morrow there will be a balance struck, but, in this particular case, deponent knoweth not which side 'twill be on—he hopeth on the right side—Or.

On this occasion all petty, rankling jealousy and professional envy is laid aside, and each and all join in a hearty "Good bye."

THE DEATH OF MADAME MALIBRAN.—But a very short time before the Manchester festival she had ridden a restive and ill tempered horse, which had very nearly flung her. She was obstinately determined to conquer the viciousness of the beast, but De Beriot implored her not to make the attempt. Finding that, though very wo of no avail, he could not control or command, which Malibran promised to obey, because, inferior as he was to her, his influence, whenever thus exerted, seemed to throw a spell over her. A few days afterwards, some friends called upon her and proposed a morning's ride in the row, to which she consented. She sent for a horse, and to her surprise no less than her annoyance, the very beast she had pledged her word never to mount again arrived for her use. There was no time to send for another. She did not wish to disappoint her friends, who had made the party expressly for her. She hesitated but for a moment, and then mounted the horse, which almost immediately began to manifest its usual viciousness. Influenced by the knowledge that what she was doing would greatly irritate her husband, were he made aware of it, and annoyed at finding that she would have to exercise all her skill to manage the animal, she adopted the unwise course of driving instead of trying to humor him. When she and her friends had reached the row, the horse bolted, he [illegible] the bit, as she imagined, between his teeth. She became alarmed, lost her presence of mind, and was finally flung; but her habit [illegible] she fell having caught the pommel of the saddle, her head was banged several times upon the road, whence she was, as soon as the horse was stopped, picked up nearly insensible. She was put into a cab and taken home; but, fearing to let De Beriot know of what had happened, she neither sent for medical advice nor gave herself the slightest relaxation from the duties of her profession. She was enciente at this very time, but had concealed this fact from her husband, so that when the Manchester physicians were called in, she being insensible, they were in entire ignorance of her real condition, and imputed her premature confinement caused by the sudden seizure to determination of blood to the head, was too late. The detention she had been subjected to, brought on by too much excitement and exertion. Her added to the improbability of her recovery, had left her no power to rally, in spite of her excellent constitution and previous good health.

NOTICE.

☞ CORRESPONDENTS, advertisers, and all others writing in relation to matters connected with this or any other department of the CLIPPER, are respectfully requested to address their favors to the editor and proprietor, and thereby avoid omissions, mistakes and confusion, which are likely to occur when such communications are addressed to our assistants.

ADVERTISERS must hand in their favors before 5 o'clock on Monday evening, in order to have them appear in that week's issue.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

☞ We never answer questions by mail. All answered to us seeking information will be answered through this column only.

D. D. W., Plymouth, Pa.—1. You are both wrong. The persons mentioned in both different parties from the Tom King who fought Heenan. 2. George Rooke claims the title, no one having accepted his challenge. 3. The fight between Bryan Campbell and Dave Lewis in December, 1870, was decided in favor of the former, who stopped four.

KEYSTONE CLUB.—1. At auction pitch the point for low is taken by the party playing it, not by the capturer. 2. At euchre, the same number of cards must be dealt to each player each round, whether it be one and three to another, or vice versa. 3. At cribbage, when a player has taken his hand he cannot correct his error of scoring too few, neither can his opponent profit by the mistake.

A NEW YORKER.—1. Old Canal street formerly stopped at Centre, having been cut through a few years since. 2. Old Chambers street runs from North river to Chatham; where New Chambers commences, and runs to Cherry street. 3. That is the order we believe. 4. Bill Poole was shot February 25th, and died on March 7th, 1855.

YORKVILLE.—"To-morrow is Sunday" is incorrect, because it applies to the present tense. The sentence should read "To-morrow will be Sunday," but as the incorrect sentence is very commonly used, it might, perhaps, in general conversation, be admissible.

W. E. F., Baltimore.—The report is exaggerated; the only demonstration that we noticed was when Craver was put out, then outbursts of gratification were freely indulged in. Had there been any hostile movement the police, who were present in strong force, would have put an end to it.

GULF STREAM.—No member of the Ward crew ever died in a boat. You are probably thinking of James Renforth, the stroke of the English crew, who was taken suddenly ill while rowing against the Ward crew, of St. John, N. B., last August, and died shortly after being removed from the boat.

F. H. M., Chicago.—"Reid made a base hit, Foley went out at 1st base, Quinn went to 1st on called balls, Reid made a run, Hastings batted in Reid and Quinn. Is Quinn's run earned? Reid's run was earned, but Quinn's does not count, as he did not earn his base.

RAY BUCK, Louisiana, Mo.—1. In throwing high dice, A's throw of three fours does not require fives to beat it, as at raffles, for two fours and a five, or thirteen will beat it. 2. In the case mentioned, the player at the first base must touch the runner. 3. It has been done many a time.

N. C. Grand Haven, Mich.—Lady Suffolk's fatest time was 2:36, made at Boston. The first time that 2:30 was beaten was in 1859, by Flora Temple, at Kalamazoo, when she trotted a heat in 2:19¾. Dexter's full time is 2:18 in 1865, and 2:17¼ in 1867.

BAYARD, St. Louis.—Goldsmith Maid's best time at Milwaukee was 2:17. She has beaten this time recently at Boston, trotting a heat in 2:16¾, a report of which you will find in another column.

CRUCHERIE, Three Rivers, Mich.—Dexter was bred by Mr. Jonathan Hawkins, of Montgomery, Orange county, N. Y. He was foaled in 1858, and was purchased by Mr. George Alley when four years old for $400.

BLUE PAUL, Tenafly, N. J.—Your account of the origin of the Blue Paul breed is correct. They are bull terriers, of a bluish color, and the breed is still kept up in Philadelphia and some parts of Illinois.

JIM, Elizabethport.—1. Jim Mace and Bob Brettle fought twice, but not for the same stake. 2. The sponge was thrown up in token of Mace's defeat at the close of the 21st round of his second fight with Tom King.

F. M., Cincinnati, O.—1. You will find it difficult to get an opening on the stage. Novices are at a discount. 2. There are more minstrel performers now than can get lucrative employment. 3 No.

E., Kent, O.—1. No, it is an assumed name. 2. There is no record that George M. Kelley ever leaped over twenty horses, but it is recorded that at Corinth, Miss., Aug. 24th, 1863, he leaped over seventeen.

BUFFALO BILL, Columbus, O.—1. He is engaged in Chicago, Ill., for next season. 2. A single scull would cost from $125 upwards. 3. There have been many such works published, all are mostly out of print.

D. M. P., St. Louis, Mo.—The large advertisement was inserted twice because your letter was in such a hurry that we received until after the paper had gone to press. $45 received. $45 more due, and six dollars for each insertion of the one now in.

FOND DU LAC.—It was a misnomer, as the second reply showed. Longfellow ran against Kingfisher in the Saratoga Cup; he has never yet met Harry Bassett.

W. F. H., Kansas City.—1. See reply to Fond du Lac. Helmbold beat Longfellow in the four mile race at Saratoga. 2. He is not recorded among the circus performers.

J. W., Hampton, Va.—If you advertise your three legged pig for sale it would apply.

R. S. C.—The word "opposite" means being in front of; consequently, you lose the bet, as Coddington's drug store is not opposite Tiffany's.

C. H. E., Haverhill.—1. Spalding and McVey. 2. The Olympics have disbanded. 3. The Bostons. 4. No, the dispute has not been settled.

FRED. F., West Point.—The cards should be cut by the player at the right of the dealer, and dealt first to the one at his left, and so on round to the right, and finally to himself.

E. W. B., Mount Morris, N. Y.—Mormons have the credit of being the wealthiest religious denomination in the United States. 2. We havn't got the statistics.

H. F. J., Memphis, Tenn.—The Missouri river, from its sources to its Mississippi, is only 3,096 miles, while the Amazon is over 4,000.

T. E. POPE, Quincy.—The best time in single sculls for two miles is 13:32, by R. P. Clark; double sculls, 12:54½, by Parker and Carpenter both of Boston, Mass.

JACK FISHER.—1. The articles submitted are not first-class, proper care not having been exercised in their construction. 2. We will think over your offer.

JACK MCCLOSKE.—We have no knowledge of the person to whom you allude, there being no record of his having appeared in the P. R.

F. N. B., Providence.—You can. The time required depends upon circumstances—present development and amount of exercise would reach him.

F. E. L., Chicago, Ill.—A letter addressed to him in care of the CLIPPER would reach him.

SCOTTY.—A having failed to go out before B, as he bet he would do, loses his wager.

CASSTON, Baltimore.—C.'s shirt being found in perfect condition, caused A to forfeit his bet.

J. F.—The hand must be played out, and if both parties score the required number of points, the game is a tie.

SUB. W., Scranton, Pa.—Dexter is neither a stallion or mare, but a gelding.

ALPHA.—The distance from New York to Long Branch is about 30 miles, and the fare $1.

H. W. FISHER, Shelbyville, Ind.—You send route, but fail to mention of what show it is.

E. J., Carson, Nev.—Sayers and Langham were opponents once only.

W. M., Phila.—Harry Bassett and Longfellow each measure exactly the same height, viz.:—16¾ hands.

SCHEURICH, Cincinnati.—The bet must be decided by the second heat, the first resulting in a dead heat.

A. R. H., Vicksburg, Miss.—You make a statement and ask no question, so that it is impossible for us to answer.

R. B. P., Pittsburgh, Pa.—The position is already filled, thank you.

E. and L., Chicago, Ill.—We think either course would be advisable.

J. S. G., Evansville, Ind.—Thank you, but the score was already in type when yours was received.

CLIPPER.—Heenan fought Morrissey in October, 1858, and Sayers in 1860. 2 and 3. Never having heard, we cannot say.

FRANK F. F., West Meriden.—Drop a line to Ed. James, whose advertisement appears in another column.

SAM, Memphis, Tenn.—Mike McCoole defeated Aaron Jones at Broomhrook Station, O., Aug. 31st, 1857.

M. F., Philadelphia.—A copy will answer our purpose just as well as the original. Thanks for favors.

"DASHER," St. Louis.—We have a regular there, but such articles as those you sent us are very acceptable.

R. E., Little Rock, Ark.—Not at present, but when the regular fall season commences we will consider it if you write.

R. A., Chilicothe, O.—The party playing the female characters with Dupree and Benedict's minstrels is a man.

A. F. C.—As no name is signed to the communication, we cannot publish it.

W. ALLEN.—Many thanks; they will be returned as soon as used.

H. K., New Orleans, La.—Yes, certainly, or send a carriage for them.

C. F., Titusville, Pa.—We shall not require it until the fall season commences.

R. H. S., Bath, L. I.—1. Fort Hamilton is on Long Island. 2. Bowanns canal.

FAR BOY, Bannack, M. T.—We presume not, or it would have been answered.

INQUIRER.—1. We cannot say; as long as it will pay, we presume. 2. Yes.

J. B. B. C., Toledo, O.—He cannot play in any other club until sixty days after having your claim.

J. W. F., Cleveland, O.—We should be glad to oblige you, but the notice would be contrary to our rules.

ATLANTIC, Princeton.—As you don't wish the communication published as written, we decline to say anything about it.

BAKER.—1. We do not know where you can obtain a copy. 2. We have no record of McCann.

J. J. ELSIE, Hazleton, Pa.—Money must be posted before the challenge can be published.

EUCHRE.—Jack being the highest euchre card, it wins in cutting for deal.

PETER J. BANKER.—Schaffer had the best third base record of 1871.

C. C. F.—1. See statistics in base ball books for 1872. 2. They forfeited.

KIDD, Cincinnati.—Flora Temple's time, when she beat Ike Cook at Cincinnati, Oct. 7th, 1859, was 2:19½, 2:17, 2:21½.

B. E. R., Rochester.—Your opponent's ace and deuce puts him out before your Jack; hugh, low counting before Jack.

BARON.—A, having but one to go, and turning up Jack, went out first.

D. L., Mobile, Ala.—We decline to make comparisons as to the relative merits of any public performers.

J. F.—We know of no one who could fit you to become a variety hall performer.

ALBERT, Baltimore, Md.—The lines were published in New York daily papers the day following the inauguration of the statue.

THOMAS WILLIAMS.—Thank you, but the position is already filled.

J. M. MUSH, Fort Bridger.—Thank you; the bill will be used.

R. F., Salina, O.—Most of them are made to order in Europe.

HARRY.—You can get them of Ed. James, who advertises.

W. L., Milford.—Certainly he has, and read the rules.

BURLESQUE.—For three months, cash in advance, $10.92.

B. W. H.—In such a case we should consider it a draw.

QUAINT SPIFF.—Mack's objection to the throw is right.

H. C. G., Grand Rapids, Mich.—Respectfully declined.

J. W. B.—Cannot say.

THE BOSTON JUBILEE.

SIXTH DAY, SATURDAY, JUNE 22D.
PROGRAMME.—PART I.

1. Von Weber's grand overture to "Der Freischutz," by the grand orchestra of 1,000 performers.
2. Eichberg's new national hymn, "To Thee, Oh Country," received with the most unprecedented enthusiasm at Music Hall, at the Annual Exhibition of the Public Schools.
3. Sixth appearance of Herr Johann Strauss, who will conduct his much admired "New Vienna" concert waltz, played by the grand orchestra of 1,000.
4. Repetition of the finale of the third act of "Ernani," which created so great a furore on Tuesday, rendered by the Bouquet of Artists, operatic chorus, grand chorus, organ, orchestra and military bands.
5. Song, "When the Swallows Homeward Fly," 2d time, by special request, conducted by the composer, Herr Franz Abt.
6. New march, entitled "The Inman Line," composed expressly for the festival by Alfred E. Warren, and dedicated to Wm. Inman, Esq., in acknowledgment of his noble generosity in transporting the band of the Grenadier Guards to and from America free of expense, by his celebrated line of steamers.

PART II.

1. Second appearance of the splendid band of the Kaiser Franz Grenadier regiment of Germany, in brilliant selections.
2. Fourth appearance of Madame Peschka-Leutner, the greatest soprano who has ever visited America.
3. Second performance of the "Star Spangled Banner," with its thrilling effects of chorus, organ, orchestra, military bands, bells and cannon, set to solo by Mr. Julia Howard-Wood.
4. Grand Benediction March, from Meyerbeer's "Huguenots," by Bouquet of Artists, operatic chorus, grand chorus, with organ, orchestra and military band accompaniment.
5. First appearance of the colored chorus of 150 voices, including the celebrated Myers Brothers, and the "Jubilee Singers" from Nashville, Tenn., in the hymn entitled "Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord," to the music of "John Brown," and in the audience are invited to join in the chorus.
6. Hymn, "The Morning Light is Breaking," for grand chorus and organ, and the audience will join in the 2d and 3d verses.

This was styled the "Russian Day, but like that of the Austrian (Friday), there was no attempt to render the appellation appropriate. It might better have been termed the "African Day," for the novelty, and the only one, was the appearance of coal black Myers sisters and the Jubilee singers from Tennessee, thumping and banging the singing of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe's "Battle Hymn of the Republic," set to the tune of "John Brown," created quite a sensation. The other noticeable feature of the programme was the re-appearance of the Kaiser Franz Grenadier band, who favored the Bostonians before them, excelled their first day's performance, opening in the overture to "Tannhauser," followed by a march and winding up with "Hail Columbia," with all the usual accompaniments. One of their number, Herr Koch, also executed a cornet solo splendidly, the band redring amid a storm of applause, with their honors thick upon them. The "Inman Line Quickstep," a composition of little merit, was fairly rendered, while Mme. Leutner's efforts were crowned with the applause, and Strauss and his waltz were received with great cordiality. The repetition of the "Star Spangled Banner," Mrs. Houston West singing the solo, was even better than before, and a fully encore was loudly demanded and complied with. There was nothing else deserving of special remark. The audience was nearly equal to that which assembled on Thursday, and included General Butler and Secretary Robeson, who were guests of the city.

On Sunday, 23d inst., the experiment of giving a "sacred" concert was tried, but though only a nominal sum was charged for admission, the attendance was smaller by considerable than on opening day, half of the chorus and fully one-third of the members of the orchestra were absent. Mr. Arbuele executed a cornet solo with that excellence for which he is famed, while the playing of the German quartet, and the singing of the Prochair and Varalona by Miss Worthy of praise, as were other features, but the reduced chorus was weak and the orchestra less effective than before. The managers state, as a reason for the absence of these performers, that some had gone out of the city upon a visit to relatives, and would be on Monday, while others remained away because of religious scruples. It is thought however, that the majority will not be seen there in future. Efforts have been made and will be continued to induce the full chorus to remain throughout the current week at least. The receipts up to the 23d inst. had about half equaled the expenses, which are estimated at $300,000. An account of the previous days' performances will be found in another column. On Monday, the 24th—the date of our going to press—the Handel and Haydn Society, of Boston, were to have produced "Israel in Egypt," assisted by a second chorus from Lynn, and two other suburban towns, and on Tuesday, the 25th, a grand ball is to take place, and President Grant is expected to be the star of the evening. Another attractive feature will be the advent of the Irish National Band, provided they are, as stated, now on their way across the Atlantic. It is to be hoped that the patrons of the concern will not be forced to listen to so many repetitions as they were during the past week.

SQUIBS AND THINGS.

— The following epitaph, it is said, may be seen upon a tombstone in Wisconsin:—

"Here lies the body of Christian Grace,
Who finished six platters, and commenced upon seven,
And exploded. Of such is the kingdom of Heaven.

— A New Hampshire farmer, who has been much annoyed by his neighbor's cattle breaking into his meadows, posted the following notice on a board in plain view to all who pass that way: "Readers, my men or women lettin there kows run the rode, wot gits inter my medders aforesesd shall have his tail cut orf by me, Obadiah Rogers."

— Three young country, Ky., farmer lately sent the following "warning" to a neighbor:—"I hear by for bid you not to move nor Remove arer Rail off of my fence or in ny other person or persons down in my land as if you do you will see prosecuted against accordin to Law un less you have a lawfull authority From Warren county sed court ky."

— The people of Rochester, N. Y., have a very limited idea of the cost of bread, butter, breeches, boots, etc.; he proposes gaining his livelihood by going out early of mornings and "finding" whatever has been lost the previous evening.

— A minister who was preaching a funeral sermon became warmed with his "subject," and, pointing to the corpse which lay before him, exclaimed:—"Here, brethren, we have before us a living witness and a standing monument of the frailty of human hopes."

— Dr. Clopton, of Georgia, has invented a "parlor still," which can be placed on the mantel-piece, and manufactures from 5 to 10 gallons of brandy a day. "Any lady can use it," it is said, but whether it is the still or its product which "any lady can use," is not stated.

— A San Francisco letter writer, in relation to earthquakes, says:—"Heterogeneous paralaxes prismatically converging are not due to the sicilicious introduction of photospherical asteroids, but rather to parabolic stratification of igneous zygma"—of which latter we have no doubt.

— Scientists tell us that a single drop of sea water contains about one-ten-thousand-six-hundreth part of a grain of lime. The question now comes how much sea water would be required to furnish lime enough to whitewash a picket fence or some of our city officials?

— An exchange, which gives some of its space to agricultural items, says:—"This is a good time to plant cats—they should be prepared with a bootjack, revolver, or some other utensil, and then planted under the plum tree. If you haven't got a plum tree, plant anywhere. Plant all you can, and plant deep."

— A gentleman, writing from America, says:—"There are only three drug stores in Quito, and the sign which indicates the business is a serpent. Physicians have no offices and rarely visit patients at their dwellings—persons too sick to call upon him being considered hopeless cases."

— A hotel constructed entirely of iron at a cost of $30,000,000, is talked of for Chicago; the charges are to range from $1 to $10 a day, so that all classes may be accommodated in "elegant style," and we fail to perceive where the elegance is to come from for the $1 class.

— A Maine man lately sued his son-in-law for horse feed, lunches, etc., furnished during the courtship of his daughter, and in reply to him as to what was the value of meals, etc., furnished the old gentleman while visiting his daughter since her marriage.

— A New Hampshire school marm has the following certificate from one of the trustees of a school where she formerly taught: —"This is to certify that Famar Noyes stands on a medium with other girls of her age and sex, and for what I know, is as good as folk in general."

— An Ohio woman, who has three times been a widow, has had the following inscription placed upon the tombstone of each of her departed dear ones:—"We shall meet in Heaven, husband dear."

— A Minnesota woman lately yoked herself with a cow, and dragged a harrow over the uneven ground while her husband was seeding, and the legislature has been memorialized to prevent the doing of such things.

— A saloon keeper in Lynchburg, Va., advertises that gentlemen coming to his place for refreshing beverages "must bring orders from their wives, which is rather rough on thirsty individuals who have no wives.

— Although the internal revenue tax on matches is only one cent per box, the amount received from this source last year by the government was $20,000,000, making 2,000,000,000 matches! Like the wonder is what becomes of them all.

— A married woman lately sat up all night darning her husband's stockings because she read in the newspaper that "in consequence of the bad condition of the firemen's hose, much property was burnt up."

— The bass drum manufactured at Farmington Falls, Me., for the Boston Jubilee, is five feet in diameter, and of the same height, and is so wide that there is no car of sufficient capacity to transport it.

— Wild fowl are said to be so numerous in Iowa that thousands of them are killed by railroad trains running among them; and not to be outdone, Norfolk, Va., boasts of an eagle with a bell on its neck hovering over the town.

— A woman in Indiana cautions all persons against harboring her runaway husband, who, she says, may be recognized by his broken nose, which was injured by coming in contact with a skillet in her hands.

— A minister who has lately been accused of theft, visiting gambling houses, &c., proposes giving a series of lectures on his "experiences." The subject is a good one, and, if properly advertised, ought to draw large houses.

— A lady in Iowa, who is unfortunately, blind, has learned to thread a needle with her tongue and makes an exchange wants to know if there is "anything in the world that a woman's tongue cannot do—or undo?"

— A laboring man told the census taker he had better than a dozen children; but, on further examination, the official could count only eleven, when the irate father exclaimed:—"Well, isn't that better than a dozen when one has to provide for them?"

— A law lately passed in Iowa forbids catching fish in any other manner than with a hook and line in the inland streams of that state, and imposes upon violators of the statute a fine of $5 for every fish caught.

— The following is the concluding sentence of an obituary of Robespierre:—"This extraordinary man left no children except his brother, who was killed at the same time."

— The London Times lately accused the mayor of that city of inciting a riot, wherefor the wrathy mayor brought an action for libel in the jury awarded him ten guineas damages.

— The codfish caught this season are unusually large, and it is said that many of them weigh from fifty to sixty pounds. Many of them ought to weigh that much.

— Some people have strange ways of enjoying themselves—a chap in Danbury, Conn., goes to the dentist's and has a tooth pulled whenever he feels like having a little fun.

— A lady lately passed in Iowa forbids catching fish in any other manner than with a hook and line in the inland streams of that state, and imposes upon violators of the statute a fine of $5 for every fish caught.

IS NOT THE police department putting on too many airs just now? A prize fight cannot take place but what the police step in and spoil the sport. And only last week some of those German gentlemen who were on a strike were about to make a riot, and put new heads on those detestable creatures who would not strike; but the police clubbed the riotous gentlemen, and stopped that fun. We are not surprised that the German strikers denounce the minions of the law for their uncalled for interference; when men are engaged in the lawful pursuit of a riot, by what right, we should like to know, do the reckless police interfere?

A TOUCHING INCIDENT.—While the funeral procession of the late James Gordon Bennett was passing down Broadway, a blind little newsboy was observed among the throngs who lined the sidewalks; knowing the little fellow, we watched him, as he instinctively made his way to a tree and began to climb up. "Why, Johnny, what are you after up the tree?" we asked. "I want to git a good place to see the buryin' of the great newspaper man," was his reply, and in a moment after he was seen perched on a friendly limb, far away from the crowd, intently staring at the mournful cortege, which he heard and felt, if he could not see.

WE HAVE INNUMERABLE instances of the remarkably quick characteristics of the inhabitants of Cincinnati. We are now told, as an another evidence of the rapidity with which they do things out there, that in just forty-eight hours Cincinnati home-brewed whiskey is converted into twenty-five year old Bourbon. In this city, our strong point is increasing the quantity rather than giving it age, and we have thousands of dealers who, in a single night, double every gallon they get hold of. There is a great deal of money made by this mode of doing business.

"NO NAME."—Senator Carl Schurz is engaged in the somewhat arduous occupation of organizing new parties, he "coming out from the foul party" as soon as he finds it able to walk alone. His latest movement is the attempted formation of an illiberally-liberal association at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. As the gentlemen interested seem to be at loss for a name for their last conclave, we piously suggest that it be called "The ruffled Schurz party."

MUCH MUTTON.—"Our Jim," who has been to the jubilee, says it was very affecting to hear that chorus, full twenty thousand strong, sing:—"We all like sheep," from the Messiah. James says they sang as if they felt it, as if their life depended on the fact being made known that they "all like sheep." The dreadful boy sacrilegiously observes:—"Jonah was h—l for fish, but these jubilee singers is heller for mutton."

AFTER ALL the fuss about Dr. Livingstone, it now appears that he don't "want to go home." It is to be hoped that the letters he is said to have forwarded by "on, Stanley, on," have not been manufactured to order; but these swamp angel stories and Ujiji dispatches have a "queer" sort of look, to say the least of them. If Stanley has secured a lock of the long lost doctor's hair, all will be well.

THERE IS A MAN in Warsaw, Ind., who has been married eight times, and was but twice a widower. This shows the progressive character of the people of Warsaw, but Warsaw many wars saw before this condition of things was brought about by that man, the results of which must have been adverse to the woman cause. Day is dawning, and the regeneration of man is at hand. Let us bide our time.

A SAMPLE of port wine was lately analysed, and found to consist of molasses, alcohol and logwood. Well, this is much better than we had any reason to expect, and those vicious editors who have persisted in their reckless statements about strichnine being the principal ingredient, must feel cheap enough when they see their false heresies exposed to the light of day.

THE GIRLS of Rondout, N. Y., are about organizing a society for the encouragement of young men desiring to marry. This is another vile plot against the liberties of our sex, and the young men of Rondout should not submit to it. There's too much of this sort of encouragement already, and the thing's got to be stopped, before there's blood shed.

RISING.—The Mississippi river, at Keokuk, recently rose seventeen inches in ten hours. "Our Jim," trying to emulate the father of waters, this very morning rose one foot in two hours; but the effort was too much for his tired nature, and the boy quickly fell back in his little bed.

IT IS ESTIMATED that there are 5,000 "literary and highly educated men" connected with the press of Great Britain. Now if this thing had not been told us, we should never have known of it, as the works of these "highly educated men" do not bear out the allegation.

CHATHAM STREET SCENE.—"How much for these pants?" "Six dollars is the lowest I can take." "I tell you what I'll do—I'll give you two dollars." "Take 'em along."

EVERYBODY who patronises the big jubilee is credited with having successfully performed the "Boston Dip."

AQUATICS.

BROOKLYN YACHT CLUB REGATTA.

On Saturday, June 22d, the fifteenth annual and fifth autumn regatta of this first class club of the City of Churches, came off on New York bay, everything being favorable except that most important element, the wind. The entries were as follows:—Schooners—Madeleine, Brooklyn Club; Eva, New York Club; Madgie and Ianthe, Brooklyn Club. First Class Sloops—Meta, Jessie, Kate, Mary E. Smith and Addie, Brooklyn Club; Captain, Bayonne Club; West Wind, Harlem Club. Second Class Sloops—Twilight, Brooklyn Club; Undine, Jersey City Club; Sophia, Qui Vive, Onward, Flying Cloud, Brooklyn Club; Wild, Ham Club; Gaudy, Brooklyn Club. Third Class Sloops (open boats)—Meteor, Favorita, Aquatic, B. E. Mallory, W. T. Lee, Maud, Brooklyn Club; Jeannette, Bayonne Club; Oriental, Jersey City Club. The course for schooners and first class sloops was from anchorage to stake-boat at South-west Spit, passing it from westward to southward, thence to light-ship, rounding it from northward to eastward, and return to home stake-boat, which was off Bay Ridge dock. For second class sloops from anchorage to stake-boat at Southwest Spit, passing it from the westward to southward, thence around stake-boat at outer bar buoy, in Gedney's channel, rounding same from southward to eastward, thence to home stake-boat. The third class sloops (open boats), from anchorage to stake-boat at Southwest Spit, rounding same from westward to southward, thence to home stake-boat. The allowance of time for schooners and first class sloops was based upon the length and breadth of yacht on the water line. The allowance of time for second and third class sloops was based upon length only. At the time of starting, the wind was north-north-west, blowing moderately, and the tide was half ebb. The leaders in their respective classes were the Madeleine, Meta, Qui Vive and Bella. Below we give the time of passing the Spit buoy and lightship, as also of the arrival at the home stake-boat.

BOSTON vs. ATLANTIC.

The Atlantic Club, of Brooklyn, visited Boston, June 17th, and there filled the place of the Baltimore Club, which had been announced to play a series of games in Boston during the opening Jubilee week. The Atlantics were expected to retire from the field on the occasion a badly whipped party, instead of which, however, they fielded so finely, especially Ferguson, that the Boston nine found themselves in the rear at the close of the sixth innings, with the score against them by 4 to 3. In the seventh innings an error in throwing enabled the "Reds" to recover their lost vantage ground, and the final result was their success, but only by a score of 6 to 4. The score:—

Runs earned—Boston, 2; Atlantic, 1. First base on errors—Boston, 6; Atlantic, 4. Umpire—Rogers, Lowell Club. Time of game—1 hour and 30 minutes.

In the second game, third of the series, played June 18th, the "Reds" played better and the Atlantics failed to equal their previous display, so the result was the signal defeat of the Brooklyn nine, as the score shows:—

First base by errors—Boston, 6 times; Baltimore, 3 times. Double plays—Boston, 1, George Wright and Barnes; Baltimore, 1, Radcliff and Mills. Umpire—Mr. C. Goodwin, of the Harvard Club. Time of game—1 hour and 45 minutes.

BOSTON vs. ECKFORD.

A game played between these clubs, on the grounds of the former, at Boston, Mass., on June 20th, terminated in a most inglorious defeat for the Brooklynites, after a first class exhibition of mufinism upon their part. The score:—

MUTUAL vs. TROY.

On June 20th, the above clubs played their fifth game together, on the grounds of the Chicago Base Ball Association, and this time the Troy nine won with ease, they defeating their opponents by a score of 13 to 3. The weather was unpropitious for a large attendance, the sky being clouded and threatening rain, consequently there were not as many present as there would have been had it been a clear day, for this game of the series between the two clubs took place on the Union Grounds, Brooklyn, L. I., on May 18th, when the Troy nine defeated the Mutuals by a score of 5 to 3. The finely played game of the second was played in Troy on June 6th, which the Mutuals won by a score of 8 to 2. On the 11th of June the third game was played, the Mutuals again winning by a score of 10 to 4. On the 13th the fourth game of the series was played, and once more did the Mutuals win, this time by the close score of 6 to 5 only. This is the last game of June 20th ends the regular series between them, the last game of June 20th ends the regular series between them, the Mutuals winning three out of the five games, the total scores being—Mutuals, 24; Troy, 20. The work between the two nines this game of June 20th stood at 6 to 1 in favor of Troy at the close of the second innings, but in the next four innings the Trojans were prolific with earned, the close of the sixth innings leaving the totals at 6 to 6 each. In the seventh innings Troy handled the bat with effect, and added 7 runs to their score, and won by the totals of 13 to 3. The score:—

THE YALE AND HARVARD FRESHMEN played a match game on New Haven Course, Ct., on June 6th, the former nine winning by 4 lengths of a boat.

ATHLETIC vs. CLEVELAND.

The second game of the championship series between the Athletics and Forest Citys was played in Cleveland, O., on Saturday, June 22d, and was won, after a hard struggle, by the Athletics, the score standing 9 to 8.

The first innings commenced with the Forest Citys at the bat, Hastings leading off with a fine hit to left field. Safe hits were also made by Wolters, White and Simonton, but only one run was scored, as Hastings in running around the bases was cut by Fisler to Malone. The Athletics also tallied one, but that was not earned.

The next two innings resulted in whitewashes for both sides, the fielding being simply perfect.

In the fourth and fifth the Forest Citys also drew blanks, while the Athletics made two in the fourth and four in the fifth innings, the batting being hard and safe, and all but one of the six run being earned.

In the sixth the Clevelands succeeded in getting in one more run, and also one in the eighth innings, while the Athletics were blanked in the sixth, seventh and eighth.

The ninth innings, however, was the great one of the game, and exhibited the capabilities of both clubs in a marked degree. White led off at the bat for the Forest City with a clean fine hit to left field. Simmons went out on a fly to Cuthbert, and the next three men, Sutton, Swasey and Fisler, scored first, White and Swasey running home. Pratt then struck sack, also Hastings, and, amid wild throwing and some confusion on the Athletic side, Sutton, Fisler and Pratt tallied, not only tieing the score but leaving the Forest Citys one ahead of their opponents. Stephens was run out between second and third and Holdsworth died at first, thus ending the innings. The latter is the first striker, Cuthbert, waited a long time and took his base on called balls; McBride flew out, and Meyerle and Malone earned bases, Cuthbert and Meyerle succeeding in scoring, thus winning the game by one run. In this they were aided by a wild pitch and a bad error in judgment on Swasey's part, who held a fly ball instead of dropping it for a double play. The game was won by the merest scratch, neither of the two runs in the ninth innings being earned. The excitement towards the close was intense, and as the Forest Citys have not lost a game in Cleveland this season, the spectators had strong hopes that they would win this also. The score:—

ATHLETIC vs. GEORGE M. ROTH.

On the 19th inst., a game was played at Twenty-fifth and Jefferson streets, Philadelphia, between the Athletic and George M. Roth clubs. Both nines played rather carelessly in the field, although at times the amateurs evinced the possession of nearly as much skill in that department of the game as their professional opponents. In the last innings of the Roths, three men, two of them on the base were put out while running on a foul ball, the triple play concluding the contest. The fielding of Cuthbert, Treacy and Mack was the most prominent feature of the game, the score of which we appended:—

RESOLUTE vs. CHAMPION.

These rival candidates for the championship of New Jersey, met at Waverly, June 21st, to play their first game, and a close contest being anticipated, the attendance was quite large, though the weather was excessively hot. Both clubs had out representatives nines, but the Resolutes had the advantage of being more familiar with the peculiarity of the rough ground, and, playing with a lively ball, had the best of it decidedly. The contest was decided by the play of the first two innings, the score at the close standing at 8 to 2 in favor of Elizabeth, the Champions of Greys of Jersey City being nowhere. The game was unworthy of a detailed description and we therefore refer at once to the score:—

SHORT STOPS.—On June 17th the Atlantic club, of Boston, defeated the Libertys, of Charlestown, at Somerville, Mass., the score footing up 23 to 2. The Oriental Club, of Galveston, Texas, contended with the Houston club, for the possession of a medal offered by the Volks' Fest Association, on the 14th inst., and won by a score of 32 to 7. The Clipper club, of Lisbon, N. Y., warmed the Neptunes, of Ogdensburg, at the former place, on June 15th; score, 49 to 6. The Alerts, of Boston, on June 19th; the score vanquished by the Athletes, of Boston, on June 19th; the score was 13 to 8. The Swan B. B. C., of Baltimore, Md., was reorganized on the 19th inst., and the following officers were elected to serve for the ensuing year:—Thomas H. Hamilton, president; Wm. T. Mosley, vice president; Thos. J. Eaton, recording secretary; John Hamilton, assistant recording secretary, James W. Cole, treasurer; directors, Thos. H. Hamilton, Wm. M. Moreland and Jas. R. Marine. The nine intend to play as juniors this season, as they have not joined the amateur association. The Riversides, of Keyport, N. J., went to St. Louis on the 14th inst., and polished off the Varieties club by the following score:—R.'s, 10; V.'s, 7. The Pittock base ball club, of Pittsburgh, Pa., reorganized on June 22d, and elected the following officers:—John Jamison, catcher and captain; Thomas Lazelle, p.; George Brown, 1st b.; Thadeus Feehan, 1st b.; James Connor, 2d b.; John Callahan, 3d b.; Charles Conway, l. f.; Corcoran, c. f.; James Conway, r. f. The Chris. Graff club, of the same place, beat the Wilsons on that date, scoring 30 to 20, and the Senecas beat the Allequippas by a score of 26 to 19.

THE LEES OF NEW ORLEANS.—The members of this club held a festival at their park on June 9th, for the purpose of raising the necessary funds to defray the expenses of the club during their northern trip, about fifteen hundred spectators assembling. In addition to this important sweepstakes, pigeon shoots and pedestrian contests, they played games of three innings each with the Excelsior, Lone Star and Le Lee, Jr., clubs, winning each, the scores footing 15 to 4, 6 to 1 and 7 to 6,

YACHT LAUNCH.—The new schooner yacht Vision, built by James McGarvie for Mr. Abrahams, of the N. Y. C., was launched on the 15th inst., from his yard, foot of 44th street, South Brooklyn. Her dimensions are as follows:—Length on deck, 49 feet; on keel, 40 feet; extreme breadth of beam, 16 feet; length on waterline, 42 feet; length on keel, 32 feet; depth, 6 feet; draught of water aft, 7 feet; draught of water forward, 6 feet; length of main boom, 34 feet; length of gaff, 24 feet; length of bowsprit outboard, 20 feet; tonnage, 68.

YACHT CLUB TRAVEL.—Chas. S. McCarthy, secretary of the Water Witch Boat Club, of Boston, writes to us, on behalf of said club, publicly offering thanks to the members of the Vesper Club, of the Annex Hill Navy, for the hospitality and kindness shown them. C. Miller, and other members of the West End, upon the occasion of the interregnum of Fellowcraft. They hope to have an opportunity to "reciprocate" at some future time.

THE TURF.

MONMOUTH PARK RACES.

The game of Jerome Park race course, on closed, and Rose of Sharon, on the 8th to enter and the saddle, was the favorite of the betting with odds ranging from 2 to 1 to 3 to 1 against the field. The latter was composed of Bonnie Scotland, Ten Broeck, Harry Bassett, Fenian, Revenue and Rappahannock. The latter has unfortunately broken down, or she would have been about winning the Monmouth Oaks, and the Belmont Stakes, for which the latter will have to represent the stable in that race. Frank Rice is in the Western Home Maker for her own old, two miles and a half to which, if he runs, he will have to meet Kapsom, Glenelg and Vauxhall, a formidable trio of racehorses. Kentucky has no engagements.

COL. McDANIEL'S STABLE.—This favorable string of racers comprises the great sire, Harry Bassett, Jr., Dundee, Hyder Ali, Hesper, Rosa Bassett, Fanny Ellsler, Lizzie Lucas, and a two year old filly by Joliet, dam by Alfandel. Harry Jr. looks in splendid condition, and his legs are as sound as a dollar. He does not look so big a horse as he actually is, as he is well balanced in his every part. The Colonel feels assured of holding the Kentucky champion in the Monmouth Cup, but how he is going to get there is the question. He is not in the habit of running nothing but cripples for the honor and glory of his home. Joe Dundee looks very fit, and will do to repeat Harry Bassett's performance of last year, in winning the Jersey Derby. Fanny Ellsler and Abdel Kerse are to be in the cup, but they will find Joe Dundee a hard nut to crack. Lizzie Lucas is one of those may be started to secure a good purse. Lady Hedley and Ben Ryder are in the Sequel, and Dr. Price filly in the Hopeful.

MR. PRICE'S STABLE.—Mr. Price, of Virginia, has a very select string, of which he has five, the Longfellow, Lothian, Tennyson, Byron and Fenian. Longfellow looks very fine and fat, and his daily two miles gallop over the course has put him in the best condition. Byron and Fenian look very well, and are in good trim for a preparation race. Tennyson looks very fine and fat, but is no horse on earth can live with him over two miles and a half, and I think the Oaks will be his last race. Mr. Price is not engaged in the Jersey Derby and Monmouth Oaks; Lothian in the Cup, and Byron in the Kentucky Post Stakes.

MR. BOWERS'S STABLE.—The racing and road horse property of Mr. Bowers, of Cincinnati, O., comprises 7 yrs, by Vandal—Dot; Bonnie Scotland, 4 yrs, by Tipperary—Bonnie Lassie; Bonnie Lassie, 3 yrs, by Lexington—Bonnie Lassie; Bonnie Lassie, 2 yrs, by Lexington—Bonnie Lassie; Bonnie Lassie, 1 yr

Introductory Overture.

MONDAY, June 24th, '72.

The day of jubilee has come, and Boston, with the eyes of Rhode Island upon her, has been doing her level best to raise the wind by a more than ordinary blow in her Coliseum; but with all the advantages of having its opening day on the anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill, when all Boston was out in its holiday attire, the jubilee was a failure, as far as the attendance was concerned, the singers and hired musicians more than doubling in numbers those who composed that courageous audience, which must have been a very funny, if not ridiculous scene. Not Gilmore, nor Strauss, not Dan Godfrey, nor Boston bells and sonorous cannon could draw the people to the inside show, and those who took stock in the speculation began to look sick and serious like, and cast their cadaverous eyes around for chances for to hedge; of the big organ, which is operated by wind manufactured by steam "down in the coal mines." As the great waltz composer stood with his back to the audience, while directing the performance of his own "Beautiful Blue Danube," and pointing with his stick to the bellowing organ, the grand Johann presented a striking picture, and reminded us very forcibly of that familiar adage—"Strauss shows which way the wind blows."..... Apropos of the big sing, in case that organ doesn't generate organic matter sufficient for the occasion, let us suggest that our street organ grinders be pressed into the service, and carried over to Boston to assist in the great musical hash.....And to still further enhance the value of a musical nation, and know a thing or two about people's orchestra, and its success, man's semi-brazen, we have only to mention that a church music committee lately advertised for an organist and music teacher, and, among others, received the following reply:—"Gentlemen—I noticed your advertisement for an organist and music teacher, either lady or gentleman; having been both for several years, I offer you my services." Sir is what we should call a musical curiosity in the natural key.....And talking about leaders and things, "Our ....." says that he was formerly connected with the theatrical profession, and avers that to him the leading business was always assigned. Upon a close cross-examination of this deceitful boy, it transpired that all the leading business he has done was in his capacity of usher. .....Now this time we must say it "go up" in balloons, consequent upon an artificial expansion, and creditors will stand from under.....Since "Humpty Dumpty" abdicated at the Olympic games, and the funny clown started out on a tour, managers have been in such a hurry to negotiate with the wily pair, that it puts us very much in mind of a Fox chase.....Old John Robinson's great show is in Brooklyn, and politicians who would like to learn how to ride a five-horse act, or ride two horses at once, as it were, and who also desire to walk the tight rope, or fence, without leaning on either side until it is necessary to do so, can get a wrinkle by observing the movements of old John's performers, who embrace some of the best in the profession. Children half price, and no questions asked.....As the boat with which the Londonsee beat the Atalantas is to be exhibited in their Crystal Palace, might it not be just as well for our boys to bring over the boat that they were to have had in charge of one or her in Wood's Museum, to show how she was injured on the voyage out in the British vessel? One ought to be as great a curiosity as the other.....The British Grenadier Guards' Band, all the way from England, must be a rather immodest body of men, for notwithstanding the presence of so many ladies at the Boston jubilee, the band appeared in their bearskins. Ah, my Jim! intimates that in such a costume their playing must be only a skin game.....Harry Leslie, the rope walker, who met with such a painful accident in Washington, a couple of years ago, offers to make a 4th of July ascension in Philadelphia, by day and night, for $250; he proposes to walk on a rope stretched from the State House steeple to a hotel opposite, cooking his dinner by the way, and doing various other doings; before he goes up, he wishes the Philadelphians to come down.....Our Jim, who has considerable trouble with his boarding house keeper, says that she would prove a valuable addition to the signal service man's corps at Washington, and save a good deal in the way of telegraphing, too; for when her face puts on her sour look, it always denotes a coming storm; the only objection to it, is, that there is nothing about her by which to foretell fair weather, as that is entirely out of her line.....Now, that the birds of song have taken wings and flown, so to speak, to the other side of Jordan, we will let a disconsolate manager talk behind their back, and tell us what he knows about managing:—

AN OPERATIC MANAGER'S LAMENT.

The birds of song have gone and left us,
Vainly to replace we try;
Difficult mourn in their festivities,
Who have drained the public dry.
And now, the summer's solstice on us,
All my patrons hence have flown,
Some to Long Branch or to Newport,
While I am left here all alone.
Worse luck, running o'er my ledger,
For the season's loss or gains,
But a pile of bills remaineth
To reward me for my pains.
There's Parepa, the divine one,
Nightingale in petticoats,
There's Miss Kellogg, and there's Nilsson,
All, as I can vouch have throats!
And they make the most of them, too—
So, at least, I should opine—
Pouring down at my expense, too,
Floods of fowl and floods of wine.
Lucky man, say all the critics;
Impresario must have made
Fortunes by his season's triumph;
No, by great Maria's shade!
Hark! Hope whispers solace cheering,
There's some song and dance man left,
And the real slave troupe of minstrels
Near us—so we're not bereft.
And, if in a box still tighter,
There's Pat Gilmore's big drum—so,
With some acrobats and jumpers,
One might make his grub, you know.

.....The fair Lydia Thompson, who is now in England, recruiting her health and forces, will be with us once more ere the sultry days of July shall have come to an end. Lydia has gone the rounds pretty well since she arrived in this country, and has met with many adventures in her travels. Once, during a trip "out west," in a theatre the manager of which did not roll in wealth and the jewels, she was obliged to levy upon the contents of the treasury to make herself secure, as it were. A comical witness on the operation remarked that it reminded him forcibly of Thompson's Seizure..... Do you see that gentleman in a light suit, patent leathers, and a delicate cane, promenading on the shady side of Broadway? Do you notice how majestically he moves along, how serenely happy he looks, and what a sweet smile he has for the many friends he meets as he sails along in all his glory? Well, that is Jimmy Reed, a favorite juvenile, after a long negotiation with Manager Sniffin, of the Grand Boulevard Theatre, Jimmy has just signed a contract for next season, and he is at peace with all the world. It takes but very little to make some men happy. Ah, there's John Pooley, heavy man; he doesn't look very well for a heavy man, does he? Left out in the cold, probably, for next season, with a wife and six children clinging to him for support. Why has Ab been left out? Oh, probably, he was not quite attentive enough to the commands of Carry Jones, one of the manager's favorites; so Pooley got his head cut off. That's petticoat government, you know. So we go; if we could only follow the undercurrents that ripple the surface of stage life, what scenes we should witness, what confessions we might hear. But au revoir, time moves on space, and we must do likewise.....Professional people—and ladies, notably—who are frequently annoyed by the malicious stories whispered behind their backs by persons who know nothing of their affairs, and are evidently themselves "posted" in all the peccadilloes of which they complain (in fact, "They" is the name by which this many tongued monster is known), will cut this morceau out and paste it in their scrap books:—

"THEY SAY."

Passing down the Bowery,
Only t'other day,
Our friend, Tom Tattle, hailed us with—
"Hollo! stop, I say!
Heard the green room gossip,
Don't the rumor scout;
Miss Lolly's got a little girl—
True, without a doubt."
All around the rumor flew;
What they say must needs be true;
She'd got a girl (twixt I and you)
To wash her dishes out!

Stopping for a social chat
And a fresh cigar,
Some one close upon our heels
Hailed us with "Aha!
Heard the latest scandal?
'Tights' has t'en a cub;
For casting people's characters,
And they say he's 'up.'"
All around the rumor flew;
His friends had "up" him, it was true,
What characters he drew,
And "up" meant posted up.

And so at every step we made
Some stopped our walk to tell
How the "last freak" of all had paid,
Or how Sue Smirk had "fall;"
How Milly Miles had "run away"
With minstrel Billy Boner,
How Jenks was famous for his "sights,"
Or Stubbs was "breaking stones."
As all about each rumor flew,
We thought 'twas sad, and so would you,
Folks should have nothing else to do
But speak in whispered tones!

City Summary.

"ON THE JURY," a sensational, domestic drama, by Watts Phillips, was produced, for the first time in this city, at Wallack's Theatre, on Monday evening, June 17th, and acted with the following cast:—

| | |
|---|---|
| Dexter Sanderson | James..... J. Peck |
| Mr. Brougham | Edith..... Ella Barns |
| Mr. Tibbets.....Chas. Fisher | Tilda..... Emie Germon |
| Prof. Schmidt.... J. H. Stoddart | Rosa Sanderson..Miss McClellan |
| Robt. Sanderson..B. T. Ringgold | Miss Nippingale.....Mrs. Sefton |
| Mr. Curlett.....Chas. Koch | Mrs. Winch..... Carrie Martin |
| Waterman..... E. M. Holland | Clara..... Flora Clayton |
| Pieman..... W. Quigley | Kate..... Miss McCormick |
| Bargeman..... W. J. Leonard | Spinks..... Miss Blaisdell |

It is by no means a powerful drama; the dialogue is not particularly brilliant, neither are the characters strongly drawn. As we published the plot when the drama was first produced in London, Eng., we have no need to rehearse it here. The sensation of the drama consists of a small boat, containing the heroine of the play, being run down on the Thames by a river steamer, and the rescue from a watery grave of that lady by her lover. This scene, which closes the act, was set with freshly painted scenery, while it presented a realistic effect, but the working of the boat and steamer was not effectively managed. They both crossed the stage so close to the footlights that the illusion which might have been produced had they crossed in the third or fourth entrance, was very nearly dispelled. There was but little scope for acting afforded the characters, save in two or three instances. Miss Ella Burns, who made her first appearance at this theatre, acted Edith carefully and artistically, evincing the possession of greater dramatic ability than the character afforded scope to display. She has a good figure and stage presence, and would undoubtedly prove an acquisition to any theatre. Miss Frankie McClellan, who likewise made her first appearance, acted Rose Sanderson in an artless and ingenuous manner, being tastefully costumed and made up. Mrs. John Sefton deserved much praise for her artistic impersonation of the school mistress, Miss Nippingale. Miss Emie Germon's Tilda was the life of the drama. It was brimming o'er with mirth, and kept the audience in the best of humor. Correctly conceived and so naturally acted that all art was concealed, it enabled the audience to see Miss Germon at her best, and in a style of soubrette character in which she has few, if any equals. The other young ladies, who represented school girls, were natural, and evinced care with their respective characters. John Brougham did not have a very agreeable character as Dexter Sanderson, but acted it creditably; Charles Fisher, as Mr. Tibbets, a condemned felon, though entirely innocent of the crime for which he was convicted, deserves much praise for his natural acting; J. H. Stoddart, as Professor Schmidt, found little opportunity to display the quaint humor he possesses, but occasional flashes here and there set his auditors in a roar; B. T. Ringgold acted the conventional lover, Robert Sanderson, satisfactorily; Mr. Rock well delivered the few lines allotted to Mr. Curlett commendably, and the minor characters received due attention at the hands of E. M. Holland, W. J. Leonard, W. Quigley, and J. Peck. The drama was acted during the week to a meagre attendance.

THE HIGH temperature which prevailed during the past week depleted the attendance at all the places of amusement in this city. At some theatres the persons on the stage and attaches in the auditorium nearly outnumbered the audience. The prospects for a successful summer season do not appear very flattering. The strike among the laboring classes, the large number of our citizens that have gone to Europe, and the many families who seek quiet country retreats for the summer, have reduced our theatre-going population to its minimum standard. Moreover, there are apparently less strangers in the city than is usual at this time of year. All the large hotels are complaining of a lack of guests.

MISS NILSON, who has the reputation of being one of the best artists that adorn the London, Eng., stage at the present time, will play an engagement at Booth's Opera House during the coming season.

Charles Loveday, were passengers for Europe per Adriatic, 28th inst.

MISS KATE NEWTON, who possesses not occasional flashes here and there set his auditors in a roar; B. T. Ringgold acted the conventional lover, Robert Sanderson, satisfactorily; Mr. Rock well delivered the few lines allotted to Mr. Curlett commendably, and the minor characters received due attention at the hands of E. M. Holland, W. J. Leonard, W. Quigley, and J. Peck. The drama was acted during the week to a meagre attendance.

THE HIGH temperature which prevailed during the past week depleted the attendance at all the places of amusement in this city. At some theatres the persons on the stage and attaches in the auditorium nearly outnumbered the audience. The prospects for a successful summer season do not appear very flattering. The strike among the laboring classes, the large number of our citizens that have gone to Europe, and the many families who seek quiet country retreats for the summer, have reduced our theatre-going population to its minimum standard. Moreover, there are apparently less strangers in the city than is usual at this time of year. All the large hotels are complaining of a lack of guests.

MISS NILSON, who has the reputation of being one of the best artists that adorn the London, Eng., stage at the present time, will play an engagement at Booth's Opera House during the coming season.

Charles Loveday, were passengers for Europe per Adriatic, 28th inst.

MISS KATE NEWTON, who possesses not only a thorough and conscientious knowledge of her profession, but a rich and powerful contralto voice, has purchased a brown stone residence, No. 130 East 37th street, at the corner of Lexington avenue, where all communications should be addressed.

ALBERT W. AIKEN commenced an engagement at Wood's Museum on Monday afternoon, June 17th, acting in a drama entitled the "Red Mazeppa; or, The Madman of the Plains." The drama is in three acts, lacks merit in construction and the interest flags at times. Mr. Aiken had no opportunity for acting and read his lines in a monotonous manner. It was acted both afternoon and evening during the week, but attracted only meagre attendance. This evening, June 24th, Dominick Murray is announced to commence an engagement, when a new drama, written by himself and C. W. Barry, entitled "Escaped from Sing Sing," a story of criminal life in New York, will be acted for the first time.

MRS. JENNIE STEWART added to the population of the United States a fine healthy boy on June 17th.

A SUMMER SEASON, under the continued management of James E. Hayes, was commenced at the Olympic Theatre on Monday evening, June 17th, when Johnny Allen, Little Mac and Miss Alice Harrison opened an engagement, acting in McCloskey's drama entitled "Schneider," which has been so often reviewed in these columns that it now needs no comment. During the evening Mr. Allen and Miss Harrison performed double songs and dances, and singly sang several songs. Between the second and third acts Little Mac performed an "Essence," and in the drama his comical imitation of an elephant, all of which met with much favor. Efficient support was rendered by W. H. Southard as Dick Fairchild; George Mitchell as Mr. Thornton; Sidney France as Tom Cranshaw; E. Chapman as a British; Mr. de Bonay as Jim Slocum; T. A. Miller as Ben Roberts; Robert Grace as the Policeman; Miss Susie Clark as Gretchen; Miss Louise Arnot as Mary Cranshaw, and Little Hettie as Little Lowesa. The attendance on Monday night was excellent, but with the commencement of the warm weather this theatre shared the fate of the others.

MACKIN and WILSON, double song and dance, as well as double clog, were the front rank specialty artists of Shapley's Minstrels on the evening of June 17th. Being good performers, they were received with much favor. Their dancing is conspicuous for rapidity of execution and excellence of time. Nelse Seymour, who had been absent a few nights in consequence of indisposition, re-appeared and was favorably received. The first part was very enjoyable, Reilly the while being changed and fresh gags and witticisms introduced. Delehanty and Hughes closed their engagement June 15th. In the olio William Henry Rice continued his burlesque prima donna songs, Harry Macarthy sang songs with banjo accompaniment, Charley White and Nelse Seymour created a deal of merriment by their performance of a sketch called "Jack Cade," and a sketch called the "New Squire" wound up the performances. The following week, June 24th, Bob Hart, Ethiopian comedian, is announced to appear. The present week will be the last of the season, and the troupe will start immediately upon a traveling tour, commencing at Baltimore, Md., July 1st. The present season has proven one of the most successful ever inaugurated in this city.

MISS AMY DE BRENT, serio-comic and character vocalist, was the only fresh appearance at Tony Pastor's last week. A petite figure of well rounded proportions, adorned with a blonde wig and clad in a costume of white material reaching to the knees only, exposing to gaze well proportioned limbs, encased at their pedal extremities in neat little boots of golden leather, was the tout ensemble presented to our gaze as she made her initial bow. She possesses a voice of much power and sweetness, which evinces considerable musical cultivation. Her performances were received with great favor and repetitions were enthusiastically demanded and gracefully accorded. Her earliest performances were composed of serio-comic songs, and later in the evening she sang character songs which met with the favor. Billy Noonan and Alice Bateman continued their clog dances, and Billy Pastor's songs, acts by Hen. Mason and Celia Ilerd, dances by Marie Goreniio, songs and dances by Hurley and Marr, the usual number of sketches, including that of "The Bowery Newsboy," which concluded the performances, filled out an agreeable programme. The season is to close with the performances of the present week, and on July 1st a dramatic season will be inaugurated under the management of Robert Johnston.

AT THE BOWERY THEATRE, on Monday and Tuesday evenings, June 17th and 18th, Charles Foster's successful drama of the "Swamp Angels" was acted, preceded by a comedietta, entitled "A Separate Maintenance." On Wednesday evening, for the benefit of the treasurer, John J. Jones, the third act of the tragedy of "Othello" was performed, with W. H. Whalley as Othello, and J. B. Studley as Iago, both of whom had voluntarily given their professional services, followed by the "Swamp Angels," and the nautical drama of "The Pride of the Ocean." On Thursday and Friday evenings the programme of Monday was repeated. A matinee performance of the "Swamp Angels" was given on Saturday, and repeated in the evening, in conjunction with the "Lost Song; or, The Sailor's Return." This evening, June 24th, W. H. Whalley is announced to commence an engagement, and during the week the benefits of three popular favorites of the company will occur, that of William Marden on Wednesday evening, June 26th; George France on the 27th, and Miss Millie Sackett on the 28th. They have all labored conscientiously during the season, and deserve a liberal patronage at the hands of those they have amused.

AT THE THEATRE COMIQUE, the sensation entitled "Chicago; Before, During and After the Fire," continued the attraction the past week. The season will close with the performances of June 29th, and the theatre will be re-opened under the continued management of Josh Hart early in the coming fall as a variety theatre, with, we are assured, one of the most talented companies ever introduced in this city. A summer season is to be inaugurated on July 1st, under the management of G. L. Stoute, when John Hart will re-appear and perform in a new drama entitled "The South; or, After the War." During the past week Mr. Charles R. Thorne, Jr., withdrew from the cast of "Chicago," and has retired for the summer to the sea shore, his character being filled by George W. Middleton.

J. ZABRISKIE, a tenor vocalist who possesses a fair meed of merit, made his first appearance with the Georgia Minstrels at Lina Edwin's Theatre, on June 17th, and continued during the week. The first part was changed, in the olio Bob Haslett's burlesque jig was one of the chief features, and the balance of the programme was similar to that of the previous week.

CHARLES HOWARD, late with Arlington, Cotton and Kemble's Minstrels, at Chicago, Ill., arrived here during the past week.

JOSEPH PROCTOR is in this city, and will remain some few days. He is negotiating for the production, at a Broadway theatre, of a sensational drama, which met with great success on its production in San Francisco, Cal., entitled "The Red Pocket Book."

ARNOLD JONES, business manager for McAllister the wizard, arrived last week for a brief sojourn.

J. C. McCOLLOM, the popular actor traveling with Mrs. D. P. Bowers for some seasons past, is in town and rapidly closing star engagements for the coming season.

J. H. MCVICKER was in the city during the past week, on a flying visit. His new theatre in Chicago, Ill., now being erected upon the sight of the former one, is rapidly approaching completion.

THE MISSES OLIVIA AND ROSA RAND, having concluded their engagements in the city of Baltimore, are now the guests of Henry J. Horn, Esq., of Lexington avenue, in this city. They will shortly visit Saratoga Springs, where they will pass the summer vacation, recruiting their health preparatory to the fall campaign. We are gratified to learn that their past season has been quite successful.

MRS. W. M. HOLLAND, professionally known as Miss Effie Johns, who recently arrived in the city from Demerara, British Guiana, while absent from her lodgings on the evening of June 20th, was robbed by some thief, who broke into her room and stole $200.

E. A. SOTHERN, and John T. Raymond arrived in town last week. The latter will play Asa Trenchard with Mr. Sothern during his engagement at the Walnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa., commencing Sept. 2d, also at Wallack's Theatre, in this city, in the run of "Our American Cousin," with which the regular season will commence on Sept. 30th.

CHARLES FECHTER has decided to return to this city from England almost immediately; on his arrival work is to be rapidly pushed forward on the Fourteenth Street Theatre, and it is thought it will be opened early in the coming fall.

THE PREPARATIONS FOR RE-BUILDING NIBLO'S GARDEN are slowly progressing. The new theatre will probably not be ready for opening before January 1st, 1873.

HARRY PALMER is very ill in London, Eng.

THE GENIAL C. W. COULDOCK is in the city. During his recent wanderings on the western plains he gathered a new batch of stories, some of which, we believe, he relates in the Indian language. His reputation as a story teller—not a Biblical—fully equals that which he bears, as a thorough and conscientious actor.

HARRY WALL, who has been absent since May 25th, 1870, in England, will sail for this city the latter part of July. He has made arrangements to take charge of the business affairs of Mr. and Mrs. Dion Boucicault during their starring engagements in this country. Mr. Wall is well known to managers and the profession on this side of the water, having "engineered" many popular stars throughout the United States, even to the Pacific shores. His address in England up to the date of his sailing and where letters will remain him after his arrival here, will be found in a card in our advertising columns, which peruse.

MLLE. ROSA, as she is professionally known, presented her husband, Harry Clifford, with a little son and heir on June 19th. Both are doing well.

MR. AND MRS. DION BOUCICAULT are to commence an engagement at Booth's Theatre Sept. 9th, which will continue ten weeks; thence they go to Boston, Mass., playing at the Globe Theatre three weeks, and then probably to the Walnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa. They can remain in this country only until May, when they return to London, Eng., where Mr. Boucicault will assume the management of the Covent Garden Theatre.

THIRTY YOUNG LADIES are wanted for the fall season at the Grand Opera House. Apply as per advertisement.

THE THIRTY-FOURTH STREET THEATRE was announced to have been opened for a dramatic season on June 22d, with J. B. Studley as the star, supported by Miss Kate Meek and a company. On arriving there, about half past eight o'clock P. M., we found the theatre closed and shrouded in gloom. It had not been opened.

A. A. PARKER informs managers, through a card in another column, that he is engaged in organizing a first class combination for the season of 1872 and '73. A prospectus will be furnished before July 1st, and all communications can be addressed care of Col. T. A. Brown's agency.

LEFFINGWELL is to play Romeo Jamer Jenkins at the Bowery Theatre, on the occasion of Miss Millie Sackett's benefit, on Friday evening, June 28th.

MISS KATE NEWTON (Charles Backus), the pretty and talented actress, will start upon a European tour of five or six weeks' duration by the steamer China on June 26th. Miss Newton has for a long time held a prominent position in dramatic ranks, while in private life her society is much courted. She will be accompanied by her husband, the well known Ethiopian comedian and end man of the San Francisco Minstrels, Charley Backus, who will probably return with some portraits for his "dramatic album." They go abroad for pleasure and needed recreation after their professional labors.

COL. T. A. BROWN, dramatic agent, 718 Broadway, publishes in another column lists of legitimate and variety managers and combinations, for which he is engaging people, and a list of stars for whom he is authorized to arrange time for the coming season. The lists include the leading managers in Europe, and other cities, and of many of the principal stars and combinations, and managers and artists will, probably, be interested in their perusal. The New Opera House, Providence, R. I., and the St. James Theatre, this city, can be rented through his agency. Managers can secure the right to play "Chicago, Before, During and After the Fire," through him; also, the services of Sergt. Burke, zouave drill, and Lieut. Cole, ventriloquist.

AT THE UNION SQUARE THEATRE "Prima Donna of a Day" is preceded by the farce of "An Alarming Sacrifice," and the whole winds up with James A. Oates' benefit on the present week. [illegible] ued on the bill during

THE SAN FRANCISCO MINSTRELS returned to the city recently, having closed their summer season at the St. James Theatre, Boston, Mass., June 22d.

Dramatic.

FROM SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., we have the following dramatic advices, up to June 18th, from our regular correspondent:—"The California Theatre is in the second week at the California Theatre has been one of extraordinary success, the production of 'Divorce' creating an excitement not paralleled for a long time. The title alone is sufficient to draw all the women in town, and many who go expect to see and hear more than they do. Had a French dramatist treated the subject, intrigue and infidelity more salaciously analyzed, would have formed the motive of this drama for the stage, but as it is, shows the unhappiness springing from domestic quarrels, holds the divorce system up to scorn, and satirizes the follies and weakness es of society. It is recognized as a play of fascinating interest, full of strong situations, constructed with more than ordinary skill, forming an excellent medium for the expression of dramatic power. The great demand for seats in advance is evidence that the assemblages will continue during the run, which, on account of other arrangements—the elaborate production of 'Julius Cæsar' being one—cannot be extended beyond two or three weeks. A great deal has been done out of the common way to ensure the success of 'Divorce,' the new scenery in which it has been garbed, excepting always the tawdry over-embellished set of the last act, being pleasing and handsome, the numerous costumes worn extravagantly costly, and the cast adequate in most respects to all purposes. The full distribution is appended:—

| Alfred Adrianse..... L. Barrett | Christmas..... C. Reed |
| Capt. Lynde..... W. A. Mestayer | Guinea..... W. Osgood |
| Dr. Hunter..... H. Sympion | Mrs. Ten Eyck..... Sophie Edwin |

The acting was remarkable for sustained power and smoothness. Adrianse does not draw greatly on Barrett's powers, but being somewhat in the line of those impulsive, intensely passionate characters he plays so well, it is lifted into prominence by his finish and electric heat. Mestayer (handsome Will) made a hit as Capt. Lynde, the exquisite of fashion, whose good looks and cool assurance are of so much concern to husbands with pretty wives. The Will of Edwards was perfect, being fine in latent manliness and delightful in outward eccentricity and geniality. The portraiture was a finished gem, and its heartiness gave a freshness and color to the whole representation. A companion picture to it was Mrs. Judah's Mrs. Kemp, while Rose Evans has done nothing finer than her Fanny Ten Eyck, its pathos affecting the audience to tears. Minnie Walton, perfectly lovely as Grace, displayed exquisite taste in her toilets, and realized that charming freshness so necessary to carry out the idea of the character. The remainder of the parts, and among them may be particularized those sustained by Williamson, Plympton, Sophie Edwin and Helen Tracy, were acceptably rendered, the benefit of time given the actors for study having had a great effect in producing a finish and tone to the entire performance. .....The audiences drawn by Miss Maggie Mitchell in her second week at the Metropolitan Theatre, if not so large as was expected, have been of good quality. 'The Pearl of Savoy' has been the attraction, in which Miss Mitchell, as Marie, received a greater share of admiration than hot Fanchon. The play has often been seen on the boards here and calls for no extended comment. It is known for a weak opera adaptation, simple as to interest, harmless as to sentiment, of which it has an abundance. It was placed upon the stage in respectable style and acted with varying degrees of merit. The better impersonations were Piercy's Arthur, Miss Osborne's Dame Margaret, Maggie Moore's Obenchon, and Mrs. Rea's Marchioness. Mr. Coggswell, who is the most acceptable actor in the company, did not play Lontalot with his usual correctness, being inclined to overact. On the 14th Miss Mitchell received a benefit, when 'Fanchon' was revived. Her third week will commence June 17th with the production of the new drama, 'Jane Eyre.' .....Charles Wheatleigh is starring at Virginia City in 'Arrah na Pogue,' supported by Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Bates and W. C. Crosbie, comedian."

A COMPLIMENTARY BENEFIT tendered to A. W. Church, the "old man" of the late company at Wood's Theatre, Cincinnati, O., was to come off at that theatre on the 22d. E. A. Locke, Henry Reibel, and a host of theatrical and variety talent, have volunteered for the occasion.... John Robinson announces that he will put a regular theatre on the corner of Ninth and Plum streets, Cincinnati, O., which can also be used for circus purposes. It is more than probable that the erection of a second new theatre will be begun in Cincinnati this fall. So wrote our correspondent on the 21st.

ADA JONES, juvenile and character actress, advertises that she can be engaged for the winter season.

BALTIMORE, Md., is now again suffering from that lamentable dearth of theatricals which has for years been a characteristic of this city in the summer time, says our correspondent, writing on June 22d, adding that:—"All of the regular theatres have been closed for several weeks. A rumie in the calm during the past week, however, was the benefit of Mr. James L. Gallagher, on June 19th, at Ford's Grand Opera House, of which establishment he was the assistant stage manager the past season. This gentleman has been connected with theatricals in Baltimore for nearly forty years. Among the volunteers for this occasion were John E. Owens, William H. Bokee, Theodore Hamilton, Miss Virginia Howard, Miss Louisa Hawthorne, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wise, John Germon, Wm. H. Burton, John Reibert, Miss Emma Hall, the Rennyslebury Sisters and others. 'All That Glitters Is Not Gold' and the fourth act of 'Richelieu' were the pieces presented. The attendance was fair. On the 28th, Miss Virginia Howard will take a benefit at the Holliday Street Theatre."

A COMEDIAN and two singing ladies are wanted for Mrs. James A. Oates' Comic Opera Company. Address as per card elsewhere.

THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Buffalo, N. Y., was re-opened on June 17th, for that night only, the occasion of a benefit to the Knights of Pythias, when "Damon and Pythias" was well performed, and the attendance large.

MRS. ELIZA YOUNG, for many years a member of John A. Ellsler, Jr.'s dramatic company at Cleveland, O., was quite severely injured by the collision which took place on the Erie Railroad at Schoholo, Pa., on June 19th, she being a passenger on the eastward bound train.

EDWIN CLIFFORD'S DRAMATIC COMPANY closed a three weeks season at Houghton, L. S. Mich., during the past week, and is to go thence to Hancock, Marquette, Green Bay, Wis., and Oshkosh, closing the season at the latter place on July 5th.

CHARLES E. BIDWELL, the well known dramatic manager in the New England circuit, is seriously ill with consumption, and will probably never appear upon the stage again.

E. T. STETSON was the stellar attraction at the Royal Lyceum, Toronto, Ont., during the past week. Our correspondent, writing on June 21st, says:—"He opened on June 17th in his specialty of "Neck and Neck," which ran for three nights to excellent business. To give strength to the concert hall scene, Sage Richardson and Harry Gardiner were engaged to appear therein. Richardson does a jig, clog, and song and dance, in all of which he is A 1, being quite up to the standard of any previous performer we have seen in those lines. We cannot say as much for Mr. Gardiner; he is about the worst exponent of stump oratory (the only thing he does) we have come across in a long time. Thursday evening Mr. Stetson appeared as Richelieu in Bulwer Lytton's play of that name, and succeeded in giving an artistic representation of the wily old cardinal statesman. Allan Halford's De Mauprat was a finished piece of acting. Mr. J. Masters does not possess dignity enough to support the idea of royalty. Apart from this he gave a fair rendition of Louis XIII. Baradas was given by Frank Melrose in his usual singsong style, never doing anything original or natural. As De Beringhen Harry Lindley, by his drollery, kept the audience in excellent humor. J. R. Speckman, both in make-up and acting, gave an artistic rendering of the part of Joseph. J. C. Kenny made an excellent Huguet, at Hamilton; Gem's Falls 26th, and Watertown, 27th. James Mass and Rollin Howard in "Little Fraud" are much lifted, and the banjo playing of the former is a chief feature, while the latter's songs, given in a white face, are much applauded. Hollister's Tyrolean songs, a double clog by the Guy brothers, songs and dances by Little Charley, clarionet solo by J. G. Rampone, and a cornet solo by John Goddard fill out the programme.

JOHNNY QUEEN left Tony Pastor's traveling variety company at Johnstown, Pa., June 1st, and is now rusticating at Willimantic, Conn. He is engaged at the Theatre Comique, N. Y., for next season.

AT SAN FRANCISCO, Le Favre's Varieties, late Maguire's Opera House, was opened on June 10th with a newly-organized company. Our correspondent, in referring thereto, says:—"The time of opening was not judiciously advertised, still a well filled gallery and parquet greeted the performance, and during the week the attendance has been fair. The entertainment commenced with a first part introducing seven men and eleven girls, the latter appearing in short skirts and flesh colored tights, similar to those seen in the Bella Union and other melodeons. Excepting the efforts of Mrs. Charles Coriell, the singing was indifferent, and the end men, Lew Rattler and Charley Nickerson, met with little encouragement. The concession was an allegorical tableau, 'The Goddess of Liberty,' by Alice Le Favre, who displayed a taxeu figure under a flood of lime light. The stage was arranged with taste, the scene representing a tower in the brilliantly lighted garden, with festoons of roses streaming in all directions. The second part introduced Johnny Manning, in his trapeze act, in which he displayed great nerve and daring, but the absence of a netting made the audience feel uncomfortable. May Leslie and Edgar Stanley followed in a serio-comic duet. The Great African Dwarf,' by Nickerson, was then introduced, and Tommy Burke, evidently a novice, gave a song and dance, which was received in ominous silence. Then came the sketch, 'Red Dickey,' and Stewart and Keefe in double clog. The Child Amerland Stewart and Keefe in double clog. The Child Amerland Troupe afterwards occupied attention, Mrs. Coriell in 'Il Bacio,' Mr. Coriell's bone solo, and the violin playing of the child, Jas. Speight, forming one of the most attractive features. The performance concluded with the fairy extravaganza, 'Abon Hassan,' with Alice La Favre in the title character.....At the Bella Union the Keyno brothers, who seceded from the Emerson Minstrel minolds troupe after accompanying them into Nevada, commenced an engagement on the 13th.....A burlesque of 'Divorce' is the attraction at the American Theatre."

THE company connected with the Theatre Comique, Peoria, Ill., returned from their rural trip on June 15th, and re-opened the same evening at their hall. The trip, financially, proved a success. The company is the same as has been reported, with the exception of Harry Thompson, who was very seriously hurt in a recent railroad accident on the Peoria and Rock Island road, in which he had his right arm broken in two places, and was fearfully bruised otherwise. It will be a long time before he will be able to assume his professional duties again, as he will always have a stiff elbow joint. The company are doing a good business, considering the excessively hot weather. The place is run under the sole management of Mr. Jas. E. Jackson. I learn that Mr. Thompson has compromised with the railroad company by their paying his expenses and $150 in cash. The Comique company intend giving him a benefit at no distant day, which, under the circumstances, will no doubt prove a substantial one. So wrote our correspondent on June 21st.

LADY VOCALISTS and dancers are wanted for the Academy of Music, Richmond, Va. See advertisement.

THE season at Mortimer's Varieties, Philadelphia, Pa., will commence on Aug. 26th, and performers desiring engagements are referred to Mr. Mortimer's card elsewhere.

THE NATIONAL HALL THEATRE COMIQUE, Evansville, Ind., is still in full blast, the new appearances being Lon Campbell and Lillie Burwell, both comic vocalists; also Millie Augusta, who dances. Of the old ones that remain, we have Billy Reed, Tommy Adams and Harry Alberts, who has again been engaged as stage manager. Lou Stanford also remains. The proprietor was required by one of our justices, Wednesday, to pay $5.35 for an assault and battery on one of his artists. So wrote our correspondent on June 20th.

TONY PASTOR and his combination appeared at Masonic Temple, Louisville, Ky., June 20th, and, although the weather was intensely warm, they drew a crowded house. The programme embraced a variety of attractive novelties. There was a rumor afloat that Josie Mansfield was in the city, and the hotel registers were besieged by an inquisitive mob from morning till night, but nothing definite was arrived at. There is a Josie Mansfield, a companion of Miss Wesner's, traveling with Pastor's company, but whether it is the Josie or not, we are unable to state. Among the artists in the Pastor troupe are Harrigan and Hart, the song and dance men; Ella Wesner, the female vocalist; the popular and versatile Tony Pastor, Jennie Engel, M'lle Montalnebleau, Kitty O'Neil, Frank Kerns and Johnny Manning. They remain here three nights and open in Evansville, Ind., on the 24th. So wrote our correspondent on June 21st.

AT THE VARIETIES THEATRE, Pittsburg h, Pa., James E. Carton, Frank Carlton, Dick Gorman, Little Josie and Miss Lou Edwards were the fresh appearances on June 17th. The female Sensation Minstrels continue to please as much as any feature of the show. There are four end men this week—James E. Carton and Frank Carlton, bones; Dick Gorman and John F. Fisher, tambos. After the first part by the Female Minstrels, Little Josie gave a number of serio-comic songs very acceptably. Her singing created genuine enthusiasm. Frank Carlton's "Adolphus Morning Glory" was deservedly encored. Dick Gorman is an excellent Ventonic comedian, and his clog dancing is good. Miss Lou Edwards sings quite cleverly. She was honored with three or four recalls. James E. Carton is a comedian of more than ordinary merit, and his acting was frequently applauded. J. S. Edwards, Miss Kate Wilson, Miss Frank Christie, John F. Fisher and others of the company, gave new and pleasing acts during the evening. The house was jammed, and the attendance has been liberal all the week. Gardner and Trimble will be the managers of this establishment next season, and Joe Wilson the treasurer. The theatre will be materially enlarged, refitted, and thoroughly renovated, and opened on August 6th for the fall and winter season. Mr. Aimes, the present manager of the Varieties Theatre, will open the Fifth Avenue Opera House on August 19th, for the fall and winter season, with a full and talented variety company. The theatre will be handsomely refitted." So wrote our correspondent on June 21st.

J. H. BANKS is at Toronto, Ont., organizing a troupe to be styled the "Carlotta Ward Parlor Entertainment," with which he intends making a tour of the Dominion. So far as made up the company consists of Carlotta Ward, who gives an entertainment embracing thirteen changes of character; Joe Banks, comedian, and song and dance performer; Will. Walmsley, concertinist and balladist.

ANNIE ADAMS, serio-comic vocalist, is in the eighth week of her engagement at Deagle's Varieties, St. Louis, Mo.

HANNAH BIRCH commences an engagement at the Theatre Comique, Cleveland, O., on July 6th.

ROBT. W. MORGAN, character vocalist, jig and essence dancer, &c., can be addressed care of this office.

THE PHILADELPHIA VARIETIES presented an excellent programme the last week of their season, which terminated on the 22d inst. Mr. John T. Kelly, the favorite Irish comedian; Miss Clara Butler, vocalist, and Mr. Frank Frayne, melo-dramatic actor, were the new faces. John T. Kelly had a very seriously hurt in a recent railroad accident on the Peoria and Rock Island road, in which he had his right arm broken in two places, and was fearfully bruised otherwise. It will be a long time before he will be able to assume his professional duties again, as he will always have a stiff elbow joint. The female Sensation Minstrels continue to please as much as any feature of the show. There are four end men this week—James E. Carton and Frank Carlton, bones; Dick Gorman and John F. Fisher, tambos. After the first part by the Female Minstrels, Little Josie gave a number of serio-comic songs very acceptably. Her singing created genuine enthusiasm. Frank Carlton's "Adolphus Morning Glory" was deservedly encored. Dick Gorman is an excellent Ventonic comedian, and his clog dancing is good. Miss Lou Edwards sings quite cleverly. She was honored with three or four recalls. James E. Carton is a comedian of more than ordinary merit, and his acting was frequently applauded. J. S. Edwards, Miss Kate Wilson, Miss Frank Christie, John F. Fisher and others of the company, gave new and pleasing acts during the evening. The house was jammed, and the attendance has been liberal all the week. Gardner and Trimble will be the managers of this establishment next season, and Joe Wilson the treasurer. The theatre will be materially enlarged, refitted, and thoroughly renovated, and opened on August 6th for the fall and winter season. Mr. Aimes, the present manager of the Varieties Theatre, will open the Fifth Avenue Opera House on August 19th, for the fall and winter season, with a full and talented variety company. The theatre will be handsomely refitted." So wrote our correspondent on June 21st.

J. H. BANKS is at Toronto, Ont., organizing a troupe to be styled the "Carlotta Ward Parlor Entertainment," with which he intends making a tour of the Dominion. So far as made up the company consists of Carlotta Ward, who gives an entertainment embracing thirteen changes of character; Joe Banks, comedian, and song and dance performer; Will. Walmsley, concertinist and balladist.

ANNIE ADAMS, serio-comic vocalist, is in the eighth week of her engagement at Deagle's Varieties, St. Louis, Mo.

HANNAH BIRCH commences an engagement at the Theatre Comique, Cleveland, O., on July 6th.

ROBT. W. MORGAN, character vocalist, jig and essence dancer, &c., can be addressed care of this office.

THE PHILADELPHIA VARIETIES presented an excellent programme the last week of their season, which terminated on the 22d inst. Mr. John T. Kelly, the favorite Irish comedian; Miss Clara Butler, vocalist, and Mr. Frank Frayne, melo-dramatic actor, were the new faces. John T. Kelly had a very seriously hurt in a recent railroad accident on the Peoria and Rock Island road, in which he had his right arm broken in two places, and was fearfully bruised otherwise. It will be a long time before he will be able to assume his professional duties again, as he will always have a stiff elbow joint. The company are doing a good business, considering the excessively hot weather. The place is run under the sole management of Mr. Jas. E. Jackson. I learn that Mr. Thompson has compromised with the railroad company by their paying his expenses and $150 in cash. The Comique company intend giving him a benefit at no distant day, which, under the circumstances, will no doubt prove a substantial one. So wrote our correspondent on June 21st.

CINCINNATI, O., VARIETY ITEMS are furnished up to the 21st inst., by our correspondent, to the following tenor:—"At the Lone Star Variities the new appearances for the week have been Willie Carleton, the Irish comique; Jenny Gilmer, Irish vocalist and actress, and Ash Clayton, who does straight business. Carleton and Miss Gilmer, in their Irish songs and vocalisms, and in such little pieces as 'Molly Dear' and 'Beautiful Snow,' have made a genuine hit. Minnie Baker was here all last week and still sticks, notwithstanding the enthusiastic reception in Memphis a veracious correspondent gives her. Sadie Lloyd and Lea Florence in vocalisms, and Lew Cavana and George Morton in burnt corkistry, together with the specialties of the others above mentioned, fill up the programme. Lucy Adams closed last week and went to Indianapolis, Ind., for four weeks, at the end of which time she will probably return here. Jim Finley is temporarily confined to his room, but his condition is not dangerous. Prof. Francois, magician, is announced to open July 1st. Weather warm and biz slow.....At the Pacific Garden the only new face this week has been Jenny Wilmore in change songs, who has been received favorably. Johnny Max closed last week and went to Cleveland. Walter Gail, balladist, winds up to-morrow night. A successful trick pantomime, styled 'Hickety Pickleby,' with Ventini, Duverney, White, Master Victor and Millie Zalella, has been the main feature. The house was closed two evenings, out of respect to the memory of Mrs. Dorothea Kohlbrand, wife of the proprietor, who was buried to-day.....At the Olympic Theatre the only addition has been Ollie Melville, vocalist and danseuse. Bertha Manning has closed. Pauline, Ida Morton, Minnie Warner, Kate Hunter, Johnny Donaldson, M. A. Griffin, Billy Scott and Prof. Lawrence remain. The latter is now stage manager.....Harry Wilkinson, Johnny Birch, Johnny Weaver, and other performers, are in town.....Tony Pastor's traveling party will be at Wood's Theatre, beginning July 1st, and continuing one week."

THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Richmond, Va., has been doing a good business the past week, all other places of amusement being closed. Miss Jennie Jerome, vocalist, is the only new addition. The Holt sisters, dancers, are placed at some disadvantage, owing to their not speaking English plainly, but have become quite popular. M'lle Leoline is particularly good in her Irish jigs. Helen Revere, jig dancer, is the reigning favorite, and is good in both jig and song and dance. Bowman and Harris are hard workers and excellent performers, and Joe Allen holds his own. New faces are expected for the current week.

AT THE BALTIMORE, MD., OPERA HOUSE, the fresh appearances on the 17th were Bob Hall, violinist and general performer, and Matt Wheeler, Ethiopian comedian, both of whom met with favor. There will be no departures this week, nor additions next.....At the Odeon, Lulu Delmay, serio-comic and character vocalist, and Mollie Wilson, vocalist and danseuse, were the new faces the past week, and Miss Maggie Bowers, cantatrice, is still a favorite.

STALKER AND HOPKINS' traveling company is billed for this week as follows:—Springfield, Mass., June 24th; Worcester, 25th; Milford, 26th; Lynn, 27th; Salem, 28th, and Lawrence, 29th.

THE EXTREME HEAT the past week produced no falling off in the attendance at Shelby's Comique, Buffalo, N. Y., the hall being filled nightly. The performance opened with the farce of "Cousin Joe's Visit," well rendered by Miss Rainford and Messrs. Burton and Andrews. Miss Nagle followed in popular ballads. The Harrison Sisters made their rentree in a double dance and were enthusiastically received. Prof. Campbell introduced his theatorum, presenting many novel and amusing sensations. Mr. J. F. Hill, gymnast, made his bow, and by his skill and dexterity elicited great applause. Miss Mattie Whitmore, banjoist, produced a favorable impression. The bill concluded with the melo-drama of the "Idiot Witness," Mr. Harry Guion sustaining the title role, well supported by the company. No departures this week. On the 24th Lew Myers, instrumentalist, and Leon Whettony will appear, the latter of whom will bring out his famous burlesque of "Masonry Exposed." In addition to the usual Wednesday matinee, one on Saturday is now given, both of which are well attended. Mr. Geo. Winship, treasurer of the Comique, was the recipient of a complimentary benefit on Friday evening, and was honored by an immense house. Mr. W. is a most deserving officer, and was formerly a professional of high standing, but, by a railway accident two years since, received such injuries as necessitated his withdrawal from the boards. He has filled his present position most acceptably since the opening of the Comique. So wrote our correspondent. "Typo," on June 22d.

C. E. BLANCHETT, late business manager of Wild's Opera House, Syracuse, N. Y., will go over to Rochester to manage the Coliseum, received a complimentary benefit at Whiting Opera House on the evening of June 22d, when the following performers appeared:—Miss Agnes Sutherland, Scottish vocalist; Wesley A. Arnold, double voiced vocalist and whistler; Mr and Mrs. Harry Robinson, instrumental duetists; Miss Eva Gould, staff bell ringer; John Harwood, in a musical act; Miss Gertie Granville; Mlle. G. Barlow, in national changes, his first appearance in that city; Harry Johnson, the "Man with the Silver Horns;" Edward McCormack, amateur cloggist; Laura and Frank Christian, juvenile vocalists and members of the Philharmonic and Turner societies.

HARRY BLOODGOOD'S COMBINATION is billed to perform at Troy, N. Y., June 24th, and Syracuse, 27th.

AT THE WASHINGTON VARIETIES, Providence, R. I., Tillie Prestige appeared on the 17th, but not proving a popular card, closed on the 22d. Maggie Gray, in dance, and Billy Chase, end man, are billed for the 24th. Harry Miller, of Stalker and Hopkins' traveling company, fell from the third story balcony of a hotel in Danielsonville, Conn., whither he had gone on account of the heat, on the morning of the 16th. He was brought immediately to Providence, where he is receiving the best of care at the hands of Stalker and Hopkins. Some internal injuries were received, which will, probably, confine him to the house for a considerable time. So wrote our correspondent on June 22d.

THE ALHAMBRA THEATRE COMPANY, Chicago, Ill., was strengthened on the 17th by Mr. Alf. Miles and Miss Victoria Ross, who have proved strong acquisitions. Alf. Miles executes a very neat and artistic song and dance, while Victoria Ross is neat and graceful in fancy dance and a horpipe. The services of Gus Peters and Miss Annetta were suddenly dispensed with on Monday night. The present week's bill is replete with novelties, and the attendance remains good. So wrote our correspondent June 21st.

TONY PASTOR and his travelling variety troupe is to commence a week's engagement at Chicago, Ill., July 8th.

Negro Minstrelsy.

HOWARD'S NEW ORLEANS MINSTRELS performed at Huntsville, Texas, June 10th and 11th, and went thence to Crockett, Corsicana and Dallas.

M. B. LEAVITT'S MINSTRELS are billed to perform at Bath, Me., June 26th; Damariscotta, 26th; Waldsboro, 27th; and Rockland, 28th and 29th.

HOOLEY'S MINSTRELS, from the Opera House, Brooklyn, L. I., encouraged by the success accorded them in the suburban towns upon their recent tour, have resolved to repeat their visits, commencing at Harlem, N. Y., July 1st; thence to Tarrytown, 2d; White Plains, 3d; Jersey City, N. J., 4th; Orange, 5th; Newark, 6th; Trenton, 8th; New Brunswick, 9th; Paterson, 10th; Bridgeport, Conn., 11th; Norwalk, 12th; and New Haven, 13th.

SIMMONS AND SLOCUM'S MINSTRELS, during the week ending June 15th, drew fair audiences to the Alhambra Theatre, San Francisco, Cal. "An entire new programme was presented," says our correspondent, "which has been accepted as the most amusing these minstrels have appeared in. The principal feature was 'Hamlet, the Melancholy Prince of the Fourth Ward,' a clever burlesque, bristling with humor, a production of Add Ryman's. Successful travesties are those which treat of familiar things, and as 'Hamlet' is familiar to everybody, the point of this production is readily seen, and a large quantity of healthful laughter is created by innocent means. All of the company are introduced, and many of them appear to advantage. Ryman plays Laurence McCullough Hamlet; Slocum, King Claudius; Sweatnam, Laertes and Ghost; Sam Rickey, Ophelia, and Augustin Rothmack, the Queen. A funny scene not set down in the bills occurred on Sunday evening. As usual on that night, a large audience was present, and a young man named Jerry Jones, under the influence of liquor, being unable to procure another place, sat himself down in the last row of seats in the dress circle. His loud comment on the performance was obnoxious to the audience, but not much notice was taken of him till he whipped out a revolver and placed it upon his programme in front of him. This he toyed with, much to the disgust of those near him. Being remonstrated with by the ushers he became unruly, and finally Mr. Kelly, the door-keeper, who concluded to put him out, was shot at by Jones, the ball passing through the rim of his hat. The audience was greatly excited, and cries were uttered to 'hang him,' but Jones was safely removed, and has since been held in $10,000 bail. The judge evidently intends making him an example."

MANNING'S MINSTRELS opened at Pike's Opera House, Cincinnati, O., on the 17th, to a large house, according to our correspondent, who writes:—"Notwithstanding a regular hot spell they have had a series of most excellent houses, and have given unalloyed satisfaction. There have been some changes in the troupe lately. Con. T. Murphy having withdrawn, his place being taken by the veteran middle man, Joe Rainer, who has made his rentree into the profession this week, and W. W. Newcomb who rejoined the company. The instrumentation of the party is good, and their vocal corps strong, consisting of Gustave Bideaux, Harry Percy, J. J. Kelley, J. B. Carter, A. Bender, J. H. Rainer and J. P. Dunnie. Upon the ends, Manning and Newcomb are both ludicrously funny, and that too after different styles. In the olio, the double songs and dances of Andy McKee and Stevie Rogers, beginning with their specialty, 'Rebecca Jane,' invariably bring down the house. E. M. Hall's banjo performances are above the average, and Ricardo's female impersonations are excellent. Newcomb's burlesque, 'Necromancer,' Little Eddie's clog performances, the usual negro sketches, and a burlesque opera, with the music from 'Trovatore,' complete the programme. In consequence of their success, the stay of the party will be prolonged another week, but their location is to be changed to Wood's Theatre. On the following Monday, July 1st, they open in Louisville, Ky.....Billy Emerson's Minstrels have Pike's Opera House for one week, beginning July 15th.

EMERSON'S CALIFORNIA MINSTRELS opened at the Michigan Avenue Theatre, Chicago, Ill., June 17th, and were welcomed by a jammed house, and the attendance since has been of a satisfactory nature. The troupe is large, there being seventeen artists in the first part, comprising the popular Emerson and Walters Welch on the ends, Ainsley Scott as interlocutor; S. Holdsworth, H. Norman and C. H. Storms as balladists; and the musicians, led by C. A. Boyd. The ballads were well rendered, the comical sayings and songs by Welch and Emerson were fresh and good, while the finale, "Carry the News to Mary," by Emerson, Welch and Harry Stanwood, was cleverly done. In the olio J. H. Milburn appeared in character changes and acquitted himself finely, Stanwood's banjo solo, Emerson's specialties, Welch in original specialities, Sheridan and Mack in double acts, the saxaphone solo by Edouard Lefevre and a musical burlesque styled "Wachtel" by Charles Haywood and the company, comprised the prominent features. They exchange with the Wyndhams, appearing at the Globe Theatre on the 26th for the remainder of the week.....Arlington, Cotton and Kemble's Minstrels continue on in the even tenor of their way, and are presenting an attractive bill. The principal features of the programme consist of the usual superior first part, with a choice melange of vocal and instrumental music, and in the second part, "The Black Statue," "Scenes at the Circus," "Tricks of Illusion," "Obeying Orders," in addition to the artistic double songs and dances by Johnson and Powers. Japanese Tommy is underlined for July 1st. The grand allegorical "Picture of Progress" has been in preparation for some time and will soon be presented with handsome scenery by R. H. Hailey.....Dan Bryant's Minstrels are to appear at the Halsted Street Opera House one week commencing July 1st.....Con. T. Murphy has been secured as business manager for Emerson's Minstrels, and is at present in St. Louis, Mo., making arrangements for their opening in that city July 1st. So wrote our correspondent on June 21st.

CARNCROSS AND DIXEY'S MINSTRELS second week at the Academy of Music, Pittsburgh, proved as successful as the first. Carncross was not with the company the past week, having returned east. A number of new acts were introduced.

CHARLEY CUTTER is quite ill at the house in Charlestown, Mass., and in consequence has been obliged to temporarily give up his engagement with Billy Emerson's Minstrels.

LEW. SIMMONS'S PLANTATION MINSTRELS are announced to perform at Portsmouth, O., June 24th and 25th, and Ironton, 26th, 27th and 28th.

CAL. WAGNER'S MINSTRELS are to give entertainments at Harrington's Opera House, Providence, R. I., on June 28th and 29th.

Circuses.

WARNER AND COE'S MENAGERIE AND CIRCUS is billed to show at Dunkirk, N. Y., June 24th. Among the equestrianses and Ben Hardaway, the clown, with their show, are those spoken of by a western journal:—

Marie Sims is daily accomplishing wonders with her rising full of daring feats and graceful attitudes. Her riding is perfection itself, and she is a favorite with the ring-master, Ben Hardaway, who is also a favorite with the people. Hardaway is a genuine clown, full of fun and humor, and his quaintness and originality always bring him to the front. He has a down peter every time he appears in the ring, and his jokes are of the most laughable character. Charley Sims, the equestrian, is a splendid rider, and his daring feats of horsemanship are truly wonderful. Mr. Sims is a gentleman in every respect, and his gentlemanly qualities and courteous ability

SCENIC ARTIST WANTED.
AT TAYLOR OPERA HOUSE, TRENTON, N. J.,
for about six weeks. Address undersigned, stating salary, qualifications, &c. [13-2t] JOHN TAYLOR.

MRS. F. S. CHANFRAU.
SEASON OF 1872-3.
The engagements for the second starring season of this beautiful and brilliant young artiste, already extend beyond the holidays. First class managers, desiring time, subsequent to Jan. 1st, 1873, are respectfully invited to address the undersigned.
MRS. CHANFRAU'S previous season is believed to have exceeded in general prosperity that of any lady star, with two exceptions; its artistic results very fully confirmed her honorable New York, Boston and New Orleans distinction, as one of the most gifted and accomplished actresses now gracing the stage.
Her repertory will include a new society comedy, a strong emotional play, from the French, and probably other attractive novelties, together with her specialties of last season, "Christie Johnstone" and "Expiation." To the latter powerful play an additional act of intense interest has been added.
First class managers desiring dates for MR. F. S. CHANFRAU, are also requested to communicate with the undersigned.
C. W. TAYLEURE,
11-1f 43 New York avenue, Brooklyn, L. I.
